ATTEMPT TO TUNNEL OUT OF CHARLESTOWN

POLICE DEMAND WARRANTS FOR 'BIRTH OF A NATION' PRODUCERS

PRISON BREAK IS FOILED

Erick Lunberg, serving a term of thirty months for burglary and larceny, made a spectacular attempt to escape from the State prison in Charlestown, but was caught. He was placed in solitary confinement today, grieved over the accidental breaking of a window that defeated his plot.

Lunberg sawed two bars from his cell and had crept along the upper tier of the north wing with a wooden stringer which he had rigged to serve as a span to reach the outer window, when the end of it shattered the pane in the dark.

Guard Prendergast came running from the other end of the wing, revolver cocked. He saw the disgusted Lunberg on his perch. He ordered the young man to come down and surrender and he did, without fuss.

Lunberg is twenty-six. He was sentenced from Salem last January. A carpenter by trade he was assigned to the carpenter shop. He managed to smuggle bits of brasss and steel into his cell, No. 140, in the upper tier of north wing, and sticks which he fastened together and made into a bar nine feet long and two-by-four inches in thickness. It was this pole that he used as a bridge.

How he concealed it in his cell is a mystery. He also smuggled a small vice which he fashioned himself, and a drill and rachet. With these he cautiously cut the pieces from two bars in his cell door. It took him many nights to do it without noise. Finally he removed enough of the bars to permit him to crawl through. He concealed his work by making paper bars of the same size and color.

He crept out of his cell at 1 a. m. today, his drill, vice, rachet and pole as equipment. In pincing the pole from the tier platform to the sill of an upper window he poked a hole in the glass. But even that did not prevent him from going across it hand-over-hand, monkey fashion, when the guard rang down the curtain.

Prison officials say even if Lunberg had cut an outer bar it would have given him access to the prison yard only, the walls of which are so well guarded and too high to scale. So Erick had his trouble for weeks for nothing.

CHICAGO, April 20.—Jacob M. Dickinson, formerly Secretary of War, and H. U. Mudge, president of Rock Island, today were appointed receivers for the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company, on petition of the American Steel Foundries Company. Federal Judge Carpenter, who heard the petition, fixed the bonds of the receivers at $50,000 each.

Report Battle Between Japs and Chinese

By LEONARD C. AMES.
Personal Correspondent of the International News Service.

PEKIN, April 20.—Reports from sources usually reliable, but thus far officially unconfirmed, to the effect that Japanese and Chinese troops clashed Sunday at Tzimo, the Chinese retiring after suffering a loss of twenty men killed and wounded, reached here today.

The reports state that the Chinese troops were pursuing rebel marauders when they found their march opposed by Japanese troops who had been landed on Shantung peninsula.

The Japanese commander notified the Chinese that his troops would deal with the rebels, but the Chinese refused to abandon the pursuit. The Japanese are said to have opened fire upon the Chinese at a distance of 200 yards when the latter attempted to advance.

Suffragists and Antis Clash in East Boston

Rivalry was so acute between suffragists and anti-suffragists in Maverick Square, East Boston, that police reserves were called out to restore peace. No bombs were thrown. The conflict consisted of harsh glances, pouts and "cutting" remarks.

But things were lively for a spell. The antis opened a shop. It is to be open ten days. There was a meeting in progress when a troop of young women waving yellow flags and liberally decorated with ribbon of similar hue, marched on the scene. They lined up in front of the anti stronghold and created a counter-attraction until requested to scatter.

The suffragists said they came from the Maverick Church, the pastor of which, the Rev. A. R. Williams, a Socialist and suffragist supporter, advised their action. Dr. Williams has a huge yellow sign in front of his church. He was arrested as a spy by mistake in France last Summer.

2 ARRESTS ASKED FOR FILM PLAY

First steps to bring the fight against the "Birth of a Nation" film before the courts were taken today when formal application was made to Judge Thomas Dowd in the Municipal Court for warrants to bring into court John B. Schoeffel, owner of the Tremont Theatre, and D. W. Griffith, producer of the film.

The application made today by the Boston police was the solution decided upon following the complaint of nearly 2,000 negroes to Governor Walsh that he stop the film. The Governor conferred with Police Commissioner O'Meara and Superintendent of Police Crowley and it was decided that the police could ask for warrants under the law which prohibits "suggestive" entertainments.

Police Sergeant Anderson is the third censor to visit the photoplay, one from the office of Police Commissioner O'Meara and one from the office of Mayor Curley having previously visited the house and ordered changes.

Attorney John Cusack and John S. Graham appeared for the theatre management and J. Mott Hallowell and Michael J. Jordan represented the petitioners.

URGE JUDGE TO SEE FILMS.

Judge Dowd put the hearing over until later in the day and announced to the attorneys for both sides that after hearing the witnesses he might visit the show before passing on the question of granting or refusing the complaints.

Attorney Cusack invited Judge Dowd to see the photo play before he heard the evidence, but counsel for the petitioners objected.

Several prominent ministers were in court to testify for the petitioners, and many leading members of the bar were also present. Mr. Cusack addressing Judge Dowd said:

"We started to produce the play a week ago last Saturday and I would prefer your honor see the show before hearing the evidence. I would like to have until Thursday to prepare my case."

"I think I had better hear the evidence first and then I may visit the show to see for myself," said Judge Dowd.

FAVOR EARLY DECISION.

"I think the hearing should be held at once before more fuel is added to the flame," said Judge Dowd after Attorney Cusack claimed the theatre management were operating a show under a license and under the statutes.

"The hearing should also be held as soon as possible because of the public clamor," said Judge Dowd.

Among those in the courtroom ready to testify against the production of the show were the Rev. Horace Bumstead of Brookline, former president of Atlanta University; William L. Reed, messenger to Governor Walsh; Rev. Herbert Johnson; Acting Chief of State Police George C. Nall; Rev. D. O. Walker, Chelsea; Professor Allen W. Whaley, New York; former United States Assistant

ONLY ONE BARNES WITNESS

By International News Service.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 20.—William Barnes rested his $50,000 libel suit against Theodore Roosevelt today after only five minutes of direct testimony.

The plaintiff's only direct witness was John McGrath of Oyster Bay, private secretary to Colonel Roosevelt, who testified that he took and delivered to the newspaper and press associations of New York the Roosevelt statement of which Barnes complained. Mr. McGrath will be examined later, but Mr. Iwins stated that Mr. Barnes would offer no further testimony to prove the published libel. The main Barnes' evidence will come in rebuttal.

All preliminary formalities were out of the way and there was no possibility of the action being dismissed or delayed.

It was expected that Mr. Roosevelt would be his own first witness.

Charge British Sunk the Katwyck

By International News Service.

BERLIN, April 20.—It was officially asserted here today that the Dutch steamer Katwyck was sunk by a British submarine masquerading as a German boat in order to cause a rupture between Holland and Germany. The accusation is based upon a dispatch from the Rotterdam correspondent of the Deutsches Tages-Zeitung, saying:

"A description of the submarine boat which torpedoed the Katwyck and the behavior of its crew give reason for believing that it was of English nationality."

Swiss Complain of Cotton Seizures

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Switzerland today complained to the United States against the action of the allies in stopping at Gibraltar cargoes of cotton bound for Switzerland.

Dr. Paul Ritter, minister from Switzerland, laid before Secretary of State Bryan evidence that neutral shipments of cotton going from the United States to Italian ports for delivery to purchasers in Switzerland, are being seized by the allied fleet at the gate of the Mediterranean.

REST CASE AGAINST ROOSEVELT

Colonel's Secretary Only Witness Called by Barnes in Libel Suit.

ing him to take the State printing contracts for the last twenty years to Syracuse to be used at the Roosevelt-Barnes trial, said today he would refuse to comply. He has been advised by Attorney-General Woodbury that the contracts cannot be legally taken out of the county.

Counsel for the Colonel early today wished to make it plain that the "Take-it-all-back" speech of Attorney Bowers yesterday in arguing the motion to dismiss the suit in no way indicated that the Colonel was willing to back down. A statement was issued in which it was declared that this speech was made merely in the usual course of procedure in such cases.

IVINS'S ADDRESS.

Ivins, in his opening address, said in part:

"This is an action for libel. The plaintiff in the case is William Barnes of Albany.

"The defendant is Theodore Roosevelt.

"The court, I believe, will instruct you that all men are possessed of a good name and reputation.

"That good name and reputation are properly protected by laws governing property rights."

Mr. Ivins went on to say that Mr. Barnes and Colonel Roosevelt were common ordinary citizens, despite the fact that one had been Republican State chairman of New York and the other had been governor of that State and President of the United States.

"The case is a simple one of published libel," said Mr. Ivins.

"I want to impress on you that the public stations of these two litigants does not in any way enter into the merits of the case."

OUTLINES CAREER.

Ivins then outlined the public career of the Colonel and received the entire public records of Barnes and Roosevelt. He dwelt upon the fact that both are Harvard graduates. He told the jury all of the known acts of Barnes as State chairman and Roosevelt as Governor and President.

"We will show," said Mr. Ivins, "how, when Mr. Barnes found it impossible to agree with the policies of Mr. Roosevelt, he retired in 1914 from the chairmanship of the Republican State Committee. Mr. Barnes and Mr. Roosevelt now are plain, ordinary citizens of the United States, and we expect you to judge this lawsuit with that fact in mind."

Mr. Ivins then went into the gubernatorial campaign of 1914 of Harvey D. Hinman of Binghamton on the Bull Moose ticket.

"I will read you," Ivins said, "the statement of Mr. Roosevelt about this plaintiff, Mr. Barnes.

"If it be true, this plaintiff has no standing in court.

"If it be untrue, then we expect you to find that Mr. Roosevelt libeled Mr. Barnes to the extent of $50,000 actual and punitive damages."

Mr. Ivins then read from the complaint the alleged speech by Colonel Roosevelt on which the libel suit is based.

COLONEL ALL ATTENTION.

During the reading Barnes examined his fingers and looked at a newspaper while Justice Andrews perused the same spring catalog he read yesterday. The Colonel sat very thoughtful, paying deep attention to every word and nudging Mr. Bowers, his chief counsel, from time to time.

Mr. Ivins read "Exhibit I" from the complaint, the speech delivered by Colonel Roosevelt on July 21, 1914, on which the newspaper publication of which the libel suit is based. In part is follows:

"I rejoice at the statement of Mr. Hinman. In this campaign I have a duty to the progressives of the nation and a duty also to the State of New York. In national politics insofar as I am able I shall endeavor to strive for the success of the principles embodied in the progressive national platform. Therefore I shall oppose the policies of the present administration, which I regard as deeply injurious alike to the honor and interest of the American people.

"But in this State the prime duty is a good citizen's movement, a union movement, to save the State from the bi-partisan control of Messrs. Barnes and Murphy, precisely like the good citizens movement last year when by union the city was saved from the domination of Mr. Murphy. I go with all my heart that all independent citizens, whether Progressive Republicans or Democrats of their national affiliations will stand shoulder to shoulder for clean nonpartisan government in the State at large this Fall.

REFERS TO "BOSS RULE."

"In New York State we see at its worst the development of the system of bipartisan boss rule. The outcome of this system is necessarily that invisible government, which the Progressive party was in large part founded to oppose. It is impossible to secure the economic, social and industrial reforms to which we are pledged until this invisible government of the invisible empire working through the alliance between crooke business and crooked politics is rooted out of our governmental system.

"In New York State the two political machines are completely dominated, the one by Mr. Barnes, the other by Mr. Murphy.

"The State government is rotten throughout in almost all its departments, and this is directly due to the dominance in politics of Mr. Murphy and his sub-bosses, acting through such entirely subservient agents as Governors Dix and Glynn, aided and abetted, when necessary, by Mr. Barnes and the sub-bosses of Mr. Barnes. Mr. Murphy and Mr. Barnes are of exactly the same moral and political type. Not one shadow of good comes from substituting the one for the other in the control of our government.

"Not one shadow of good, comes from perpetuating a governmental see-saw, with first one of them and then the other at the upper end of the plank, while the function of the people of the State is limited to serving as the trestle across which the plank is laid.

"IDENTICAL INTERESTS."

"The interests of Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy are fundamentally indentical, and when the issue between popular rights and corrupt and machine-ruled government is clearly drawn, the two bosses will always be found fighting upon the same side, openly or covertly, giving one another such support as can with safety be rendered.

"These bosses do not hold public office themselves. They act through the holders of public offices whom they control. Yet they really form the all-powerful invisible government which is responsible for the mal-administration and corruption in the public offices of the State.

"My means of elected officers whose negatively good personal character offers little surface character of officers of little surface ground for attack and whose fundamental weakness or insincerity and double dealing render them fit instruments through whom the machine masters can work, these machine-masters secure the appointment to office of the public servants whose activities so deeply taint and discredit our whole governmental system."

Most of Plaintiff's Evidence Is to Be Presented in Rebuttal.

MASS 8 ITALIAN CORPS ON BORDER

By BRIXTON D'ALLAIRE,
Personal Correspondent of the International News Service.

ON THE ITALIAN FRONTIER, via Paris, April 20.—Feverish military preparations are proceeding along the entire Austro-Italian frontier.

Eight Italian corps are massed south of the frontier, ready for the call to action. These 320,000 soldiers are first line troops and chiefly veterans who have seen service in the Tripolitan campaign.

When the International News Service correspondent left Rome there was a general belief that war between Italy and Austria could not be long averted.

Austrian newspapers shared the same opinion. The Trieste News says that all the public schools have been ordered closed and that they will be used as barracks for German and Austrian troops.

The train bearing the correspondent to the frontier passed through town after town in which Italian soldiers were seen. All officers wore their field service uniforms.

TODAY IS FIXED BY ITALY AS LAST DAY OF GRACE FOR AUSTRIA

PARIS, April 20.—Italy some time ago fixed April 20 (today) as the latest date for the consideration of any proposals Austria might wish to make, according to a report current in Rome and telegraphed to the Figaro. Baron d' Macchio, the Austrian ambassador, already has given notice to embassy servants, who now are paid daily, it is said, and the same is true of the payment of tradesmen's bills for goods supplied the embassy.

The Figaro's dispatch declares that in Vatican circles it is stated that the visit made to the Pope a few days ago by Prince Von Buelow, the German ambassador, was to bid farewell to the pontiff, as the diplomat believes his departure from Rome is imminent.

British Torpedoed Own Submarine E-15

By International News Service.

LONDON, April 20.—Further details of the loss of the British submarine E-15 at the Dardanelles on April 18 were made public by the Admiralty today. An official announcement on Sunday stated that the submarine had been lost in the straits while running aground on Kephez Point, while reconnoitring the mine fields. Today's statement says that the E-15 was torpedoed and rendered useless by the British, which was done to prevent its falling into the hands of the Turks.

Plan to Unite All Railroad Unions

NEW YORK, April 20.—The International Trades Union Educational League, in an official statement, said that there was a nation-wide propaganda afoot to unite 1,000,000 railroad workers in a union under the auspices of the railroad department of the American Federation of Labor.

It asserted that a general federation of shop unions in the railroad industry had already been formed and that now there was a movement to bring the unions still closer by amalgamating all the metal trade unions.

Levermore will assume the duties of chief director.

German Wife Warns Soldiers of Suffragettes

LONDON, April 20.—The following letter was taken from a German prisoner captured south of Ypres by the British:

My loving husband:

The local papers (letter written in Magdeburg) say that several battalions of suffragettes have landed at Havre. There are 500 women in each battalion. I want to warn you to be very careful when you meet them. Don't let them scratch out your eyes and, above all, don't let them capture you. That would shame you before the whole world.

England must be in a desperate situation to send these women to the front, but I dare say they are glad to get rid of them thus. The war cannot last much more than a month longer, as we hope that our submarines will settle it.

Your loving wife, ANNA.

Wilson to Reply to German Criticism

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Ambassador Gerard at Berlin has notified the State Department that the German government assumes full responsibility for the note delivered by Ambassador Bernstorff to the United States on April 5, in which the course of the United States in carrying out its neutrality was criticised in terms heretofore unknown in diplomacy. President Wilson regards the matter as so serious that he has taken the case into his own hands and will prepare a reply.

Austrian Apology Is Sent to Italy

By International News Service.

BERLIN, April 20—(By wireless)—Austria has made amends to Italy for a recent frontier incident involving guards and Austrian customs officials. Several customs officials stepped on Italian territory as they walked along the frontier. Though the incident was regarded as unimportant, the Austrian government apologized when the matter was called to its attention and disciplined the offending officials.

By International News Service.

PARIS, April 20.—According to the Petit Parisien, Raymond Swoboda, whose examination on a charge of espionage began yesterday, is being closely watched in his Paris cell because of fear that he may commit suicide.

AMERICAN GUNS USED BY RUSSIANS

By FRANCES LAVELLE MURRAY,
Personal Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, April 20.—Six hundred thousand new Russian troops who had been held back from the front until they could be given adequate equipment and training, are now being sent to the Carpathian front. The difficulties of the Carpathian campaign have rendered reinforcements necessary in that region.

Some of the troops now in the mountain ranges have been under fire night and day for some time. Thousands have been exhausted by forced marches through the rugged country, and despite the utmost efforts of the Russian commissary department it has been impossible to supply them with the necessary food at all times.

When the advance against Hungary is resumed the Russian army will have with it cannon made in the United States. These guns, brought across the Pacific and through Siberia, have arrived at Lemberg and are being transported to the southwestern front from there.

As the Austrians, on their retirement from the San River, took with them or destroyed all railroad equipment except the cars left at Przemysl the Russians have had to replace this. These hundred cars have just been finished and placed in operation on the Galician railways.

BRITISH REPORT GAIN OF 3 MILES ON WESTERN LINE

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK,
Personal Correspondent of the International News Service.

PARIS, April 20.—Both sides of the German wedge in France are again being pounded by the allies, the British attacking on the France-Belgian border and the French pressing home against the German left flank. The fighting between the British and German forces in West Flanders is described as "almost as fierce as the recent engagement at Neuve Chapelle," when more than 30,000 Englishmen and Germans were killed, wounded or captured.

The capture of Hill No. 60, south of Ypres, where the British advanced three miles, is regarded as an important achievement for the eminences is a position of strategical importance, being the only connecting elevation in that section of the low lands.

British warships again bombarded the German positions at Ostend and Middlekerke.

Floods on the Yser, which caused a lull in the fighting in that region, are subsiding.

In upper Alsace and the Vosges the fighting continue to make progress. Near Metreral, in the valley of the Fecht river in the Vosges, the Germans are reported to have retreated from several important positions, leaving a big quantity of supplies in the hands of the victors.

Air squadrons are active all along the front. A bube that tried to attack Verdun was driven off.

Today's official communique says:

"There was nothing to add to the communique of last night as to the operations in Lorraine and in the Vosges.

"On the rest of the front there were artillery combats yesterday, particularly violent in the region of Soissons in the sector of Rheims and in the Argonne."

"The Germans captured many rifles and large stores of ammunition. The German casualties were seven officers and thirteen men killed and fourteen officers and twenty-two men wounded."

THREE BATTALIONS OF RUSSIANS TRAPPED BY THE AUSTRIANS

By STEVEN BURNETT,
Personal Correspondent of the International News Service.

VIENNA, via Berlin and Amsterdam, April 20.—Another Russian reverse was announced today in dispatches from Austrian headquarters. Three battalions of Russian troops debouching in an effort to reach the Jaborka springs districts in the Carpathians were caught between two Austro-German forces and forced to surrender after one battalion had been destroyed.

The Russians were trapped in a little valley into which they had been led by a Hungarian, whom they shot forced to act as their guide. As the Austrians opened fire from both sides the guide attempted to escape, but was shot down by the Russians.

The official reports state that the general situation is unchanged.

BUDAPEST, via Berlin and Amsterdam, April 20.—Count Ludwig Tisza, brother of the Hungarian Premier, has been wounded at Uszok pass. He is believed to be dying.

BRITISH SEIZE BOSTON CARGO

LONDON, April 20.—Among four additional vessels from the United States, detained in British ports, is the Norwegian steamer America, from Boston and Philadelphia for Bergen and Christiana, with a cargo of oil and foodstuffs. She was detained at Kirkwall and is today at Sunderland, where a part of her cargo has been thrown into the prize court.

The other ships from America held up, together with their cargoes, are the Swedish motor ship Pacific, with barley; the Swedish ship Maude, with cotton and lard, and the Danish steamer Hammershus, with cotton.

The America left Boston March 19 with about 1,000 tons weight of cargo, consisting largely of provisions—dressed meats, lard, etc., from local packing houses—and leather, with a considerable quantity of sirupe. The balance of her cargo, consisting in large part of oil, she took on at Philadelphia, from which port she sailed about March 27.

The America is a Norwegian-owned vessel, and this was her second trip to Boston. Furness, Withy & Co. are the local agents.

GERMAN OFFICIAL REPORT TELLS OF FRENCH REPULSE

By FREDERICK WERNER,
Personal Correspondent of the International News Service.

BERLIN, April 20 (by wireless)—German gains and French repulses are features in today's official report from the German general staff. It tells of the recapture of the villages of Ennor and Menil by the Germans and of other gains at various points. German troops have taken the offensive in Alsace and are attacking the French position at Hartmannsweiler Kopf.

The general staff's report follows:

"German sapping attacks in Champagne advanced yesterday.

"French attack in the Argonne, north of Four de Paris, failed.

"Between the Meuse and Moselle there were only isolated but vivacious artillery duels.

"A French attack near Flirey broke down. Near Croix des Larmes German troops entered the enemy's main position. West of Apremont we stormed and reoccupied the villages of Ennor and Menil.

"In the Vosges a French attack on Schillecker heights failed. A German advance at Hartmannsweiler Kopf gained about 100 yards of ground.

"On the east front the situation is unchanged."

THE TURKISH BLEND CIGARETTE

'MEN FOOLS,' SAYS THIS GRASS WIDOW

NEW YORK, April 20.—The heart throbs of a grass widow provided interesting testimony in the Queens County Supreme Court, Long Island City, where Mrs. Helen M. Usbeck asked Justice Garretson for a separation from George F. Usbeck, president of the Bjur Piano Company of New York.

Mr. Usbeck, whose Iowa divorce in 1913 is under scrutiny, married Mrs. Helen F. Cosnart, of Belford, N. J., soon thereafter, and, he testified, is living with her.

After Mrs. Usbeck, a most attractive and vivacious young woman, had testified they were married fourteen years ago and had a son thirteen years old, and that they had been separated since 1913, first by agreement for one year, Mr. Usbeck's counsel suddenly produced several letters addressed to him and asked if she had written them.

She said she had, but that it was purely to make her husband jealous and cause him to return to her. One letter read:

"Now that I am a grass widow I have plenty of admirers. I lead them just so far and then give them the mitt. They tell me that during my enforced widowhood I am daily growing sweeter. Men are all fools and I could n... any number of wives crazy."

In other letters were more statements of her remarkable love affairs with different men. In this connection she said her husband had begged her to obtain a divorce from him, promising not to contest it and pay liberal alimony.

John H. Usbeck, a Bronx grocer and brother of the defendant, was flatly informed by Justice Garretson that he was not believed when he testified that after the "utter separation" of his brother and Mrs. Usbeck, he had called upon her twice, had hugged and kissed her.

While this brother testified, his own wife, the mother of three children, was asked to leave the courtroom. When he had finished his unsupported accusations, his wife testified that on one occasion when Mrs. Helen Usbeck called at their home she saw her husband kiss her on the cheek. Mrs. Helen Usbeck testified this was true, that she had gone to John H. Usbeck for consultation in her trouble with his brother, and that in consoling her he had bestowed a brotherly and quite passionless kiss upon her cheek.

In reserving decision, Judge Garretson said he did not believe the story told by Usbeck's brother and that he would inquire into the legality of the Iowa divorce. Usbeck testified that while traveling in Iowa for his company, he established a residence and obtained the divorce after a residence of six months.

Oh, Priscilla! John Alden Wants a Wife

LIMA, O., April 20.—All girls named Priscilla, please write.

Mayor Miles Standish has been asked to find a wife for John A. McClelland, of Taft, Mont. McClelland didn't sign his full name to his letter of request for a wife, but Mayor Standish says he hopes, for the sake of fitness of things, that the "A" in the signature stands for Alden.

McClelland writes that he is a Hotel proprietor, a Baptist, has black hair and brown eyes, stands 6 feet, weighs 180 pounds and is thirty-two years of age. He adds that, though he is a Californian by birth, he doesn't care for the ways of Western women, therefore calls on Mayor Miles Standish to speak for him. Mayor Standish says all the letters he gets on the subject will be forwarded to John A. McClellan, but that after that John will have to speak for himself.

The S. Vorenberg Company clothiers, Washington, Hanover and streets, suffered a smoke and damage which are expected to run into the thousands of dollars, when fire was discovered on the fourth floor of the building at an early hour this morning. Employees were quickly notified and the fire department responded with several companies. The fire was confined to the third floor, directly over the basement, where the stock of clothing was stored. The firemen fought their way through dense smoke to the seat of the fire, which, after a hard battle, was extinguished. The damage to the building is estimated at $5,000, while the loss on the stock of clothing may run into the thousands of dollars. The origin of the fire is unknown. Members of ant District Attorney William H. Lewis; C. Henry Robbins, court stenographer; Dr. Alice W. McKane; William D. Brisbane, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Association; Butler Wilson, national secretary of the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and John Long, a negro 82 years old.

APPLY FOR TWO WARRANTS IN WAR AGAINST 'BIRTH OF A NATION'

There was a double interest for the colored people in the court sessions today. In addition to the desire to be present when appeal was made for warrants for Messrs. Schoeffel and Griffith, there was lively interest in the arraignments of the eleven negroes (ten colored, one white) who were arrested in the lobby or in front of the Tremont Theatre Saturday night.

LAW QUOTED BY LEWIS.

The statute under which application for the warrant was made provides that:

Whoever, as owner, manager, director, agent or in any other capacity, prepares, advertises, gives, presents or participates in any lewd, obscene, indecent, immoral or impure show or entertainment or in any show or entertainment suggestive of lewdness, obscenity, indecency, immorality or impurity, or in any show or entertainment manifestly tending to corrupt the morals of youth, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year or by a fine of not more than $500 or by both such fine and imprisonment.

ELEVEN UNDER ARREST.

The eleven defendants arrested Saturday night and the charges against each, which were scheduled for hearing today, are:

W. MONROE TROTTER, the colored editor of the Guardian, who was severely rebuked by President Wilson at the White House last November, arrested on charge of disturbing the peace.

REV. AARON W. PULLER, colored pastor of People's Baptist Church, charged with disturbing the peace.

FRED BANKS, colored, arrested with Pastor Puller on same charge.

JOHN HINES, colored, charged with disturbing theater peace and quiet.

JOSEPH GOULD, white, charged with assault on an officer in kicking Patrolman Mordivey of Roxbury.

CHARLES P. RAY, colored, charged with hurling an egg at the screen of Tremont Theatre.

CLARA FOSKI, colored, charged with making a disturbance and assisting Patrolman Van Rannighan of the City Hall avenue station.

STEPHEN MASSEY, colored, charged with attempting to rescue Miss Foski.

EUGENIA FOSTER, colored, attempting to rescue Miss Foski.

JAMES L. DUNN, probably.

JAMES T. RIVERS, colored, charged with attempted rescue of a prisoner.

DENOUNCED BY PASTORS.

The Boston Congregational ministers' meeting, at its Patriots' Day session in Pilgrim Hall, adopted a resolution asking the Governor to stop "The Birth of a Nation" in the interests of true democracy, justice and morality. The resolution in full is:

"Whereas, the photo-drama entitled 'The Birth of a Nation,' now being presented in the Tremont Theatre, has aroused the entire negro population of Boston and evoked a most unfavorable impression upon many fair-minded persons, irrespective of race or color.

"And, whereas the committee appointed one week ago to investigate this play and report its findings is unanimous in the feeling that, although from the artistic standpoint it is a wonderful exhibition, its final effect is thoroughly evil and vicious, that it arouses and strengthens race prejudice which is so serious a menace, both in the North and in the South; that it fans into flame the sectional feeling which all loyal Americans are endeavoring to eliminate; and that its implied justification of the Ku Klux and of lynch law is thoroughly against good morality and law;

"Therefore, be is resolved that we, the Boston Congregational Ministers' Meeting, hereby earnestly petition His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth, to take such action as is necessary, in the interests of true democracy, justice and morality, to discontinue its presentation."

Governor Walsh said, after receiving several delegations at the State House, that if the court should rule that the play is not unlawful, he would at once ask the Legislature for legislation which would specifically forbid spectacles which threaten to arouse racial antagonism.

At a gathering of colored people at No. 1073 Tremont street W. Munroe Trotter, a leader of the colored protestants, declared that the halting of demonstrations against the play was only a truce until the legal battle was concluded.

Miss Eleanor Blair (on left), elected treasurer of Wellesley student government, and Miss Edith Jones, p resident.

Edith Jones Heads Student Government Is Given Highest Honor at Wellesley

Miss Edith Jones of Los Angeles, a student at Wellesley College, has been elected president of the Student Government organization, the highest honor within the gift of her fellow-students.

The election, which was carried out with all the customary ceremonies, was held in the hollow square formed by the temporary administration building. The popularity of Miss Jones' election was evidenced in the cheers of her college mates.

Miss Jones was president of her freshman class and for the past year has been secretary of the Student Government. She attended Vassar before entering Wellesley. She is a singer and speaker of ability.

Miss Ruth Rand, '16, of Brooklyn, was elected vice-president. Miss Dorothy Rhodes, '17, of Brookline, secretary, and Miss Eleanor Blair, '17, of Montour Falls, treasurer. Miss Margaret Court, '17, of Buffalo, N. Y., and Miss Marion Schuman, '16, of Pittsburgh, were chosen members of the joint committee.

Announcement of the elections was made by Miss Rachel Davis of Erie, Pa., amid cheering.

2 INQUIRIES ON ASYLUM DEATH

Two investigations, one by the State Board of Insanity, the other by the criminal authorities of Worcester County, were begun today on the death at Worcester State Hospital of Simon H. Yeaw, a former business man of Worcester, who, according to official report, was fatally scalded while being given a bath at the hospital on April 4, and died last night.

Following an autopsy today in Worcester an inquest was ordered by Assistant District Attorney Edward T. Estey of Worcester County.

At the State House Dr. Michael J. O'Meara, chairman of the State Board of Insanity, instituted an independent investigation.

The official report died by Superintendent Ernest V. Scribner after the scalding of Yeaw places the responsibility upon John H. Anderson, night attendant. The report says the hot water in Yeaw's bath was turned on "by mistake." Anderson has been discharged from the hospital.

Chairman O'Meara of the State Board seeks in his independent investigation to determine why Anderson was discharged, also why the hospital authorities did not take the matter up with the Worcester police.

INQUEST PERFORMED.

The autopsy upon Yeaw was performed by Medical Examiner Fred H. Baker of Worcester and Assistant Medical Examiner E. F. Hunt.

It was reported in Worcester that Yeaw's death was directly due to blood poisoning caused by burns received in the hot bath.

It is expected that the inquest ordered by Assistant District Attorney Estey will be called on Thursday.

Medical Examiner Baker, in an earlier statement on Yeaw's death, said it was due to "an accident at the hospital, April 4. "He intimated that burns and scalds from hot water led to the death.

The report of Superintendent Scribner to the State Board of Insanity gives the original "accident," reads in part:

"Night Attendant John H. Anderson, in giving a cleansing bath, placed the patient, Simon H. Yeaw, in a bathtub, turning the water on afterwards. This unusual method of procedure was adopted in this instance because the patient always seemed afraid to get into the bath tub containing water.

"TURNED ON BY MISTAKE."

"He discovered he had turned on hot water by mistake.

"Attendant Anderson turned off water, quieted Yeaw and attempted to remove patient. Yeaw, by lifting him under the arms. On account of patient's weight and defective mental condition, which prevented co-operation, fell to the floor, carrying the attendant with him. In the fall he was over a few seconds longer than any other part of his body.

"Attendant Anderson carried Yeaw to the latter's room and summoned Dr. Carl A. Robb, physician, and Dr. A. Wilson. The latter responded at once and when he saw the result of the accident, he immediately notified the physician on duty, who at once visited patient Yeaw and found him in great pain. Attendant Anderson at once reported in full the circumstances of the accident."

It will be noticed that the report says: "He turned on the hot water by mistake." Officials of the State Board of Insanity held today that this "he" refers to Anderson, the attendant, not to Yeaw, the patient.

Regarding responsibility, the report adds:

"The responsibility for the accident was placed on Attendant John H. Anderson. He has been discharged for failing to observe the rules of the hospital relative to bathing of patients."

DESCRIBES BURNS.

The report further describes burns covering large areas on the lower back and legs of the patient.

Dr. Sidney M. Bunker, the physician who was called, treated the patient in his room. No further details of the treatment are recorded.

As a specific suggestion to prevent recurrence of similar accidents, Superintendent Scribner "recommends that attendants no longer turn on hot water without testing the temperature."

The official report of Yeaw's death, which took place early last night, is to be received by the State Board today.

Yeaw was forty-two years old. He was committed to the institution on April 3, 1914.

Dummy Safe Is Used by Robbers

CAMDEN, N. J., April 20.—Robbers entered the Woolworth 5 and 10 cent store here during the night, moved a heavy safe from under an electric light and substituted a dummy constructed of cardboard.

When employes entered the store they found the original safe in a secluded corner with its door blown open.

The robbers got less than $100.

DEWEY'S LETTER ON 'LUCKY STONE'

Admiral George Dewey once wrote Captain Walter I. Rand that he and Mrs. Dewey intended always to wear the "lucky stones" which Rand had sent to them.

The letter from "The Hero of Manila Bay" was read today before Judge Aldrich and a jury in the Federal Court at the trial of Rand, who is charged with fraudently using the mails in the sale of "lucky stones."

Rand was recalled to the witness stand and identified the letter, which had been carefully framed. The letter was written in Washington, September 18,1901, and read:

My dear Mr. Rand:

I have today received the lucky stones and handed one to Mrs. Dewey. We both intend wearing them for all time and I am sure they will bring lots of good luck.

It was most kind in you to remember us in this way and I trust you may be rewarded by having any amount of good luck in this world and happiness in the world to come.

Thanks from both of us, I am,

Sincerely yours,
GEORGE DEWEY.

SEVERAL TELL OF LUCK.

Several witnesses—men and women—testified today of the good fortune they had enjoyed since they began carrying Captain Rand's "lucky stone."

Hattie Blake, a wealthy Portland, Me., woman ,described the "lucky stone" as a sort of talisman, saying:

"I bought my stone May 26, 1914, paying a dollar for it, and immediately my health, which had been very poor, began to improve. On the 11th I had been very good, except for a slight cold the last two weeks."

Under cross-examination she said she would not part with the stone.

James A. Ryerson of New York said he bought his "lucky stone" in June, 1910, and that it brought him good luck. He lost the stone three months ago and had a streak of bad luck. So he bought another stone.

Cross-examined by Assistant United States District Attorney Rogers, Ryerson said: "If I don't lose the stone, I shall leave it to my favorite child.

James O. McCoy, a Manchester, N. H., janitor, testified he never won over a dollar in his life till he got a "lucky stone." Since then he has been winning "big money" in baseball pools.

GOT A BETTER JOB.

"The stone surely did it," he said. "I've got a better job, too."

McCoy, cross-examined, said he did not take the "lucky stone" to bed with him.

Carl A. Robb, a Providence printer, said he could foretell the weather by looking at the "natral lights" in his "lucky stone" which he had set in a ring.

"I also use it for concentration purposes," he said. "When I get out of bed in the morning I sit down and look at the stone and say to myself: 'I will be a good man today. I won't get cross. I will behave myself. I will be real good.' When I am angry I look at the stone and immediately loose my anger."

Mrs. Laura Ekstetts of North Union street, Manchester, N. H., testified she believed in the stone.

Burned Body of Boy Identified By His Father

The night watchman burned to death early today in a builder's shanty on the second floor of reconstruction work at No. 40 Oliver street was later identified by Frank A. Preble, superintendent of the job, as that of his own son, Frank M. Preble, nineteen years old.

The Prebles live at No. 3 Prospect street, Charlestown. The lad had been given a night watchman's place by his father, who is superintendent for W. A. & H. A. Hoot, the contractors.

At 2:20 a. m. Timothy F. O'Brien, employee of the Fire & Police Notification Company, saw flames coming from the shanty. Firemen found the charred body of the young watchman in the shanty. It is supposed that the fire was caused by overturning of a lantern. The damage was reported as slight.

Charge Striker on Guard Pulled Woman's Hair

Mrs. Lena Ginderno was arrested on Brattle street today on a charge of pulling Mrs. Josephine Miatietta's hair because the latter would not join a garment workers' strike.

Mrs. Miatietta came to the entrance of the clothing factory, where a strike has been in progress several days. Mrs. Ginderno was one of a number of strike pickets. According to Patrolman Gleason, Mrs. Ginderno urged Mrs. Mistietta to stay out and, when the latter declined, snatched at her hair and began to yank.

Mrs. Ginderno is thirty-six and lives at No. 15 Henchman street, North End. Mrs. Mistietta lives at No. 11 Lyman street, West End.

AMERICA'S GREATEST DRUG STORES

When You Bathe

THE beauties of ancient Rome recognized the virtues of the daily bath for keeping the body in a healthy condition and the skin soft, clear and beautiful.

¶ Many Roman rulers constructed luxurious public baths of marble, in the most elaborate forms, to perpetuate their names.

¶ Today nearly every house, and almost every apartment, has its private bath, and Bostonians probably bathe even more frequently than did the citizens of ancient Rome.

¶ The shower of today takes the place of the plunge of old, while perfumed bath salts soften the water and add a touch of luxury to the bath that even the humblest can afford.

¶ Wonderfully convenient brushes, sponges and other toilet accessories make the bath far easier today than the ancients, with all their marble luxury and countless attendants, would have thought possible.

¶ Everything you need to enhance the pleasure of your bath can be obtained at the Liggett Drug Stores, and at prices that will please.

FRANK'S PLEA FOR LIFE WITH PEOPLE

ATLANTA, Ga., April 20.—Leo M Frank will appeal for his life to the people of Georgia. His case is out of the courts. No further move at law will be made to save him, according to Harry A. Alexander, his chief of counsel.

As soon as the decision of the United States Supreme Court dismissing Frank's appeal from the decision of the Supreme Court of Georgia, denying him a writ of habeas corpus was announced, Alexander issued the following statement:

"During the last eighteen months my position as one of Leo M. Frank's attorneys has brought me into the closest and most intimate contact with him. During that time he has uttered not one word nor made one gesture indicating guilt in the remotest degree. I am as satisfied of his innocence as I am of my own existence.

DOUBT STILL EXISTS.

"The judgments that have been rendered by the courts have been controlled by technical reasons. Our appeal is now to the people of Georgia and to their officers. We know that because of the fearful doubt that hangs over the correctness of the verdict, they do not wish to see Leo M. Frank suffer the extreme penalty."

Frank, when informed of the Supreme Court decision, said:

"I am confident I will never hang. Truth and justice will eventually prevail. So conscious of the right of my cause and innocence as I am I have never faltered in spirit. I still have mind and hopes on the future and eventually I will be a free and exonerated man.

FAITH IS FIRM.

"I have never once lost faith. True it is no picnic, enduring confinement and denial of freedom, but I have borne up under it as philosophically as I was capable. I have always felt assured of eventual exoneration.

"It is a long road that has no turning. This road has gone as long as it possibly can. There is obliged to be a turning, and my innocence will be recognized."

His wife, as soon as she received word of the Supreme Court's action, hurried to Frank's cell.

UP TO GOVERNOR-ELECT.

Immediately the decision was announced Solicitor Dorsey held a conference with Attorney-General Felder on the habeas corpus proceedings which will be brought looking toward the re-sentencing of Frank.

"Any other decision would have been a surprise to me," declared Frank's prosecutor, on his way to the conference.

It appears likely that the last word to the noted case will be said by Governor-elect Harris. The very earliest date under legal procedure, and with the utmost dispatch of every factor concerned, that Frank could face the day to mount the gallows, cannot fall within two months and a half.

Governor Slaton himself is sure that he will be out of the executive chair before the case comes to the Governor for final action.

Governor Slaton made the following statement:

"The Frank case has not been presented to me and will very likely not come before me during my Hill office."

Governor-elect Harris said that he had not given any attention so far to the records of the case.

Predicts Irish Republic in 10 Years

"Ireland a republic before ten years are over, whether she will or not," was the prediction of Professor William J. Walshe in his illustrated lecture on "The Life of Robert Emmet," delivered to a large gathering in Lorimer Hall at the invitation of Division 7 of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. The lecturer was outspoken in condemnation of England's treatment of the people and patriots of Ireland.

Funeral of W. H. Depper.

The funeral services of William H. Depper of South Lincoln, who was manager of the millinery department of the Houghton & Dutton Co., were held at the chapel at Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

THIS WEEK'S OFFERINGS FOR THE THEATREGOERS OF GREATER BOSTON

'LAW OF THE LAND' AT THE MAJESTIC

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"The Law of the Land," a four-act melodrama by George Broadhurst, was presented for the first time in Boston at the Majestic yesterday afternoon.

The company is unusually capable and includes Julia Dean, George Fawcett, and Milton Sills. The opening performance was very spirited and the audience indicated its approbation of the strong scenes, and the very surprising finish of the piece.

In the first act we are introduced to Robert Harding, a very harsh and overbearing lawyer who behaved with amazing insolence to his wife as soon as she arrived from an evening party. In conversation, it develops that five years before, she and Geoffrey Morton had gone frankly to him and asked him to divorce her because she loved Morton. Harding had refused a divorce, although he did not love her. Tonight Morton is coming to demand an explanation of certain rumors concerning his honesty that Harding had set afloat during his five years' exile abroad.

Morton arrives and the cruel husband watches the lovers meet. Then Mrs. Harding brings in eight-year-old Bennie to greet Uncle Geoffrey. Harding questions the little chap, finds that he hasn't received a good report from school, picks up a horsewhip and leads Bennie into another room. Morton flings himself after them and secures the whip.

Immediately Harding accuses Morton of being the child's father instead of her husband's and Mrs. Harding admits the truth of the charge. Again they request divorce and the mistody of the child Harding refuses, and invokes the law of the land to drive Morton away. Morton departs. Harding taunts his wife with her infidelity and finally takes the horsewhip again, intending to beat the child before her eyes. To save the boy Mrs. Harding seized her husband's gun and when he refuses to drop the whip shoots and kills.

This is the situation. The next three acts are devoted to the efforts of the wife, the friend, the husband's secretary and the butler to make the murder appear as a suicide. The solution of the difficulty is so surprising that we won't reveal it.

The skill of the playwright and the excellent acting of Charles Lane as Harding, and Julia Dean as his wife, glosses over the unconventional conduct of Mrs. Harding so that the audience is moved to applause when the mother shoots to save her child. The sensational powers of Milton Sills retain sympathy for Mrs. Harding to the end, and everybody is satisfied that she should escape any penalty. Milton Sills, as the lover, succeeds in winning another movie entente than the illegal end of the triangle usually gets. George Fawcett is exceptionally happy as a short but self-hearted police inspector. George Graham as the sensational newspaper man and Mitton Sills as butler were admirable. The child part was very well played by little David Deely.

Orpheum Theatre.

A splendid holiday program was witnessed at this theatre yesterday. Among the headline features to be presented were Cressman's Jungle Friends, in a novelty musical spectacle; Mr. and Mrs. Cappelen, in a comedy farce sketch, entitled "Hired a Maid;" Ray Conlin, that clever ventriloquist; Burkhardt & White, in new songs; Rice & Morgan, comedy acrobatic stunts; Gonne & Livsey, an original skit; Jewell Sisters, pleased with their singing specialty.

'SWEETHEARTS' IS AT THE COLONIAL

If Miss Christie MacDonald is as glad to return to Boston as Boston is glad to have her come, the little star of "Sweethearts" is in for a happy week.

"Sweethearts" — with Miss MacDonald—is back in town, for one week only, at the Colonial, and there were indications last night that the young gentlemen in the box office will be busy all the week counting money.

The piece is a musical trifle punctuated with laughter; all about the baby princess and of three Prince Barr McCutcheon principalities who, in infancy, has been removed from the danger zone during a revolution and placed in the care of a laundrywoman with six girlies of her own. Princess, raised to young womanhood without being told of her station, which, indeed, the laundress doesn't know.

Act 1. — The laundry town; the laundry yard; tubs; soap; clothes; soldiers; adventurers; philanderings; more soldiers; more philanderings and some splendid music, including, "Sweethearts," "Every Every Lover," and "Mother Goose."

Act II.—The Chateau of the Prince Franz, in Zilania, just south of Zenda. The adopted daughter of the laundress is today marrying the Prince, and everybody is to be happy forever after. More courting; more fun; more philanderings; more music, "In the Convent They Never Think of Me That Way," "Tell Me How I Do It But I do" and "The Cricket on the Hearth."

Miss MacDonald, who was first showered with applause and then smothered in roses, was the properly winsome sort of adopted daughter of the laundress, so pretty, so sweet and so clever that everybody in the theatre felt that he had done well in seeing her properly elevated to a throne.

Echlin Gayer was almost irresistible as the Hon. Percy Blount-Stiggsby, a silly ass sort of caricature, and was the only principal in the lot who failed to meet an encore a trifle better than half way. Miss Maude Beattie was pretty, and exactly plump enough, as the laundress (Mother Goose), and she sang exceeding well.

Ralph Nairn was Mikel Mikeleva, the leading tenor; Percy Ames and Edwin Wilson were rivals for Ward Beck's one song, "Pretty as a Picture," was one of the successes of the night. The ladies of the long-skirted chorus know the music of the operetta, sing it effectively, are sweet, fair and easy to look upon, and in the chateau scene looked more like a lot of nice Boston girls than the same number of professional players.

"Sweethearts," finally, is an operetta for sweethearts to see and to love, whether they are sweethearts married to each other, sweethearts about to be married, sweethearts hoping to be married, or sweethearts without knowing that they are sweethearts.

A piece, as well, to take wife, sister or daughter to; which, reports to the contrary notwithstanding, is still being done.

NOT ALL

The best vacancies in high-class apartments have been taken yet. The most desirable of those left will be found listed in the "Apartment" columns of the Boston American.

Plays That Remain

CORT THEATRE—"A Modern Eve," the bright, tuneful operetta headed by William Norris and a big cast, begins its second week.

WILBER THEATRE—"A Pair of Sixes," with its excellent company, continues its wonderful run.

SHUBERT THEATRE—"Tonight's the Night," the tuneful offering of the London Gaiety Company, begins its third big week.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE—"The Younger Generation, the clever comedy of manners presented by the English company for the first time last Friday night, continues.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE—"Common Clay" began the fifteenth week of its phenomenal run yesterday. Nearly 200,000 persons have already seen this play.

TREMONT THEATRE—"The Birth of a Nation" continues its extraordinary engagement. Declared to be the greatest picture ever produced.

TOY THEATRE—"The Duchess of Dublin," the new musical comedy by M. Douglas Flattery, continues.

BEATRICE HERFORD TOPS KEITH'S BILL

Beatrice Herford heads this week's bill at Keith's Theatre. Bright as nickel, human as a family row, her monologues are cleverly given. Every word is heard and not a point is missed by the amused audience. Miss Herford begins with a woman who takes her daughter and a woman friend to lunch with the kind of fuss and chatter reads about. For first encore she gives a woman buying theatre tickets for a half hour or so. Then comes "In the Ten-Cent Store." Miss Herford leaves her audience clapping for more.

Mme. Adelaide Hermann, widow of "Hermann the Great," give an elaborate program of confusing and sleight of hand, closing with her latest illusion, in which a girl is moved about in mid-air in thoroughly mystifying manner.

Manuel Quiroga, violinist, charms with mastery of the instrument. Without flourishes or "stagey" way, young Senor Quiroga plays with both brilliance and sympathy. At times his violin fairly seems to sing.

Harry Fern & Company present "Versatile," an old soldier skit filled with human interest, melodramatic touches, overthrow of the villain and triumph of the old soldier. There is punch in the lines. One is: "He hasn't any more friends than an alarm clock."

Courtney Sisters score with songs, "Tango Shoes," introduced by Bert Cole, leads up to a tango match between three couples, with plenty of comedy. Sam Chip and Mary Marble put on a pretty love skit: "The Land of Dykes," with their characteristic songs and dances. "Just Because I Ate That Lemon Pie," by Mary and Chip, "How That Woman Could Cook," by Sam are winners. Kramer and Morton as "The Two Black Dots" and the Skaters Bijouve add to the bill and pictures show current events.

'HOFFMAN TALES' SUNG BY ABORNS

"The Tales of Hoffman," sung this week by the Aborn Opera Company at the Boston Theatre, are tales of love and bitter disappointment.

Idealism wrought into passionate affection rises again and again in the heart of Hoffman, a young poet, only to be crushed and trampled upon by sinister forces, now a doll maker, then an Italian enchantress and finally by the Devil himself.

With such romantic and dramatic theme the author of the opera, Jaques Offenbach, has found episodes into which he could weave extremes from ridicule to heart melody to tense dramatic and weird as illustrated in Satan's gloating over his diabolical victory, the death of the consumptive singer, Antonia.

"The Tales of Hoffman," although written some years ago, has a prologue in which the action takes place years after that of the plays. Hoffman is found among a jolly group of carousers to whom he tells the story of his blighted loves. In the epilogue which follows the third act we finishes the story begun in the prologue.

Some songs in this opera are exceptionally beautiful and the Barcarolle of the second act is familiar to every orawling room.

An unexpected treat was given the holiday audience last evening in the appearance of Miss Edith Helena, the well-known soprano, who sang the parts of Antonia and Giulietta. Her voice has been by Salvatoire Sciarretti, a tenor of some power with a pleasing timbre.

Morton Adkins roused the audience to real enthusiasm by his song of the toreador and Mr. Dapertutto he gave his solo to a glittering diamond ring. His voice especially rich and filled with charm.

The character of the mechanical doll with which Hoffman falls in love much to the amusement of guests, was taken by Miss Eileen Castles who acted the stiff jointed automaton with excellent effect.

The attractive opera will be sung until Wednesday night when it will be replaced by "Carmen."

Park Theatre.

The program shown at the Park Theatre yesterday was the cause of much pleasing comment among its patrons, being headed by the very popular Dustin Farnum in a wonderful picturization of the invasion of the Mexicans in California in 1840. This photo-play is a masterpiece, careful attention being given to have every detail adequately carried out. Mr. Farnum's riding is beyond description, and it is in this he is at his best.

Among the other pictures shown on the bill that were of great success was the Paramount Travel Series, Part 1. The Park Topical Review, showing the important events of the world, continues to be of great interest.

The music was excellent, the Park Concert Orchestra rendering a very fine overture. Verdi De Bastni gave a musical act that has not been surpassed for some time. The whole program will be continued for the balance of the week, and is sure to please.

St. James Theatre.

A holiday program full of vaudeville features was greeted yesterday by large audiences. Among the headliners were Bernard & Harrington, in a comedy farce sketch, entitled "Who Is She"; Senator Francis Murphy, in up-to-date monologue; Nichols, Nelson Troupe, stunts with trained hoops; Wharry Lewis Quartette, singing specialty.

Grand Opera House.

Patriots' Day was observed at the Grand Opera House yesterday, where there was a large matinee on hand to greet the girls of the Gay White Way Burlesque, an organization well equipped with pretty girls galore and comedians who have all the season proved their worth in that department of entertainment.

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Eat Less Meat and Take Salts.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.—Advertisement.

ETHEL BARRYMORE SCORES AT HOLLIS

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Ethel Barrymore was seen at the Hollis Street Theatre yesterday in a new play, "The Shadow," by Dario Niccodemi and Michael Norton.

There was a splendid holiday audience and after the second act Miss Barrymore was recalled many times by an sincere and spontaneous applause as I have heard in a theatre for some time.

There is a very striking second act in "The Shadow," one of those situations so common in the French drama, but hitherto considered too unpleasant for the sugar-loving American public. Miss Barrymore is on the stage most of the time and is talking or declaiming almost continuously. Take a wife who has been paralyzed for six years, let her be cured, and go hopefully to her husband's studio to surprise him. Instead of surprise she meets consternation. He has acquired a mistress whom he devotedly loves, during his wife's illness, and there is a child.

It is a harrowing, distressing, exceedingly disagreeable state of affairs, and Miss Barrymore makes the sensations of the wife intensely realistic.

Of course, in the end, she resigns herself to the inevitable and gives up her husband to the mother of his child.

It is one of those plays which has a depressing effect unless your sex is female, when you revel in it. At least the women last evening did.

Bruce McRae, a sterling actor, played the recreant husband with much tact and discretion. Katherine Grey, who was the mistress, was not noted for distinct articulation, but was sweet enough. Ernest Lawford, as a family friend, was the second act wise old counsellor he always contained. It is here for two weeks.

Howard Athenaeum.

It is was a gala day for the patrons of the Howard Athenaeum for there was a big holiday bill. Jess Willard, the new champion, was shown in various Havana scenes just as he appeared on that eventful day in Cuba, when he defeated Jack Johnson for the title. These scenes are truly realistic and will be shown the entire week. A feature of merit and one much enjoyed by all was the athletic sketch put forth by Eddie Murphy, the well-known South Boston lightweight. The burlesque part of the program was offered by the Heart Charmers, a clever organization of pretty girls, and a number of live wire comedians, who contributed much amusement.

Exeter Street Theatre.

Marguerite Clarke scores in the Famous Players, four-part production of an old English romance, "Gretna Green," at the Exeter Street Theatre, up to and including Wednesday. "Are You a Mason?" one of the brightest farces on record, is released by the Famous Players, with John Barrymore as the star in five reels, for the last part of the week. Other photo productions with musical numbers are given at each performance.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Israel Zangwill's masterpiece, "The Children of the Ghetto," was the feature in five reels that won instant favor with the patrons of the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday. Wilton Lackaye, the well known and popular Broadway comedian, was seen in the leading role, that of "Reb Shemuel."

DANSANT AT ARENA TOMORROW

Many features ar ein store for the lovers of modern dancing when the Arena resumes its dansants tomorrow night. A novelty will be introduced. Ten of the best modern dancers of New York will appear at the Arena tomorrow night and will instruct everyone in the latest steps. These ten young ladies are the pick of the New York dancers, and it is expected that hundreds will take advantage of the opportunity and learn the latest steps during their stay here.

Modern Theatre.

Both the holiday and the excellence of the bill offered for this week at the Modern Theatre was responsible for large and appreciative audiences yesterday. For a headline feature the management offers a thrilling five-part photo-drama, entitled: "Hearts in Exile," adapted from the novel of the same name.

PHONES GIRL, THEN STEALS HER RINGS

After telephoning to make sure Miss Rose Monahan was alone in her home on Humphrey street, Swampscott, a man broke into the house, choked her into unconsciousness after she had thrown a vase at him, and took two diamond rings, valued at $200, from her fingers.

When Mr. and Mrs. Monahan returned home they found their daughter lying on the floor, just coming to her senses. She was hysterical, but managed to give a fragmentary account of the attack.

Mr. Monahan went to the telephone to call the police, but called the fire station instead. With the fire apparatus came the police patrol and search for the robber was begun. The police believe he entered the house by the bulkhead door of the cellar, which they found open.

WOMAN AIDS IN FIGHT ON TYPHUS

NEW YORK, April 20.—Mrs. Ernest P. Bicknell, wife of the National Director of the American Red Cross, is on her way to Serbia to assist her husband in fighting the deadly typhus, which has killed 80,000 people and is still raging.

The plight of Serbia is said to be as sad as that of Belgium and Poland. In a few of the larger towns relief commissions are at work, but in the many small places and rural districts no organized effort to combat disease and poverty is being made. Typhus, pneumonia and diphtheria are raging everywhere. Several American nurses are among the victims.

"One million Serbians, one-third of the population of the country, are suffering from every possible sorrow," said Mrs. Bicknell. "They have but little money, and with this they can not buy food. It is a terrible picture, this sight of hundreds of sick children without warm clothing and without enough to eat.

"The need is great in Serbia and tremendous efforts must be made if the distress is to be lessened instead of increased."

Asks Court Order Girl to Give Back Costly Presents

Charles Klarfeld has filed a bill in equity asking the court to order Miss Sadie Saunders, twenty, of No. 456 Warren street, Roxbury, who, he claims, broke their engagemnt on the eve of the wedding, to return his presents.

Klarfeld says in his bill he kept company with Miss Saunders for a long time and that they became engaged to be married in July, 1914. At that time, he alleges, he presented her with an engagement ring which cost $328 and later with many presents, including shoes, slippers, candy, flowers and a diamond signet ring which cost $200.

3-Grain Tablet Makes Flesh.

Any one wishing to add to their weight, improve their color, and realize a normal condition of the stomach and nerves, should adopt the wonderfully successful treatment known to physicians and druggists as "3-grain hypoclane tablets," put up in sealed packages with full directions for home use. Red tips, pink cheeks, and 10 to 30 pounds' increase in weight are not uncommon results from several months' use. Ask your physician or a well-stocked druggist for them.—Advertisement.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were active when markets opened today, but the price trend was uncertain and exceedingly variable. Realizing continued, but was offset to a considerable extent by buying. There was strong pressure on the part of bears, including a powerful element of professional traders, but the public appeared to be as bullish as ever. Leaders fluctuated quickly, including Amalgamated and Reading. Rock Island was a busy target, first sales totalling 1,000 shares, and it receded a point. Mexican Petroleum jumped more than four points and as quickly lost part of the gain. Electrolytic was quoted higher and sales of the best Lake brand of copper at 20 cents a pound was reported. At the end of half an hour the majority of active issues in Boston and in New York had advanced, but in the last half of the first hour a reactionary tendency was again apparent.

American stocks were active in London, where it is said that most accounts of arrangements in this class of securities have been liquidated.

Among the early gains in New York were Amalgamated 3, American Can ⅝, American Smelting ⅝, Atchison ⅜, Baltimore & Ohio ⅝, Lehigh Valley 2⅜, Missouri Pacific ⅛, New York Central ⅛, Reading ⅝, Southern Pacific 1, Union Pacific ⅝, Canadian Pacific 1⅛, U. S. Steel ⅜, Utah Copper 1, General Motors ⅛, Mexican Petroleum 3 and Westinghouse 1. Recessions included Bethlehem Steel 2, Maxwell Motor ⅜, Rock Island 2⅛, U. S. Rubber ⅜, American Car & Foundry ⅝, Goodrich ¾, Pennsylvania ¼ and Chino ⅛.

In Boston gains included Allouez 1, Butte & Superior ⅝, Calumet & Hecla 7, Copper Range 1⅛, Granby 2, Osceola 2½, St. Mary's 1, Superior 1, Massachusetts Mining 1 and American Zinc 1¼. Losing declines were Alaska Gold ½, Boston & Maine 1, New Haven 1, Hancock 1 and U. S. Smelting ¼.

COPPER STILL ADVANCING.

It is stated that one of the largest producers sold electrolytic late yesterday at 17¾ cents a pound for export.

It is reported from Butte that Anaconda has uncovered some of the finest copper ore ever found in that camp on the 2,800-foot level of West Steward. It is said in Butte that a special meeting of Anaconda stockholders will be called for May 19 and they will be asked to increase the par value of stock from $25 to $50 and decrease the number of shares one half. From reports received from therefrom an Amalgamated official in the East, dissolution of the Amalgamated Company within thirty days is expected.

Another Butte report is that Butte & Superior has cut into copper ore at the 1,400-foot level in the Blackrock claim and the strike is regarded as important.

SIGNS OF BETTER BUSINESS.

There are many signs that business is improving. In a few lines war orders have caused a veritable boom. This is helping others, and the trade appears to be steadily upward. It is estimated that by August 1 this country's cotton exports will total 8,000,000 bales. Cotton textile mills report a larger demand for their products, and hosiery plants are doing a rushing business on foreign orders. Some New England cloth concerns are said to be booked up to the end of June. For the first three months of this year mill consumption of cotton was but 10,309 bales less than for the corresponding 1914 period.

Shoe orders from Europe received by the McElwain concern at Manchester, N. H., now total 2,000,000. An additional order for 1,000,000 is said to have been received.

Aeroplane orders received by American manufacturers from European governments last week aggregate more than $1,000,000, it is stated.

James A. Patten thinks this country's wheat crop this year may amount to a billion bushels.

The price of May spelter has advanced to 11 cents and for July and August is quoted as high as 9⅛ cents.

A HAPPY BALD HEADED MAN

Well-Known Politician Nearly Bald Now Has New Growth of Hair.

Tells How He Did It.

A western politician, well known on account of his baldness and ready wit, surprised his friends by appearing with a new growth of hair. Many of his old friends did not know him and others thought he had a wig. On being asked how he did it, he made the following statement: "I attribute the remarkable growth of my hair to the use of the following simple recipe which any lady or gentleman can mix at home: To a half-pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. It not only promotes the growth of the hair but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out. It darkens streaked, faded, gray hair and makes the hair soft and glossy. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home."—Advertisement.

Waldron's Casino.

Beginning with the matinee of yesterday what is known as "The Beauty Parade" will be the attraction for the week at Charles H. Waldron's Casino. "Five Hundred Dollars Reward" is the somewhat startling title of the piece in which the company of operatic stars, comedians, specialty people and chorus girls appear for nearly three hours in a merry melange of all kinds of amusement features. George F. Hayes, the famous "Rube," and Amherst Ali (Humpay) have excellent opportunities to create many a hearty laugh, and they net them in a fairly consistent plot.

There are numerous comical situations, interspersed with singing and dancing numbers, and a semi-serious pantomime introducing Layman de Chaulaea, which deeply interested everybody and provided the heartiest applause. Another big feature act was contributed by Tyson & Barbour, special and modern dancers.

Globe Theatre.

A wonderful holiday program was presented to the Globe patrons yesterday, with many valuable features. Among the headliners were James Grady & Co. in a quaint character playlet, entitled "At the Toll Bridge." Mr. Grady's offering made a decided hit. Norton & Earl, in a singing and talking skit pleased immensely; Delay and Sister, in a revival of the cake walk craze, were well received; Earl & Curtis, entertained with their original talking skit, entitled "The Girl and the Drummer." The Eugene Trio performed many thrilling acrobatic stunts.

Scollay Square Blaze.

Fire which is believed to have started from an overheated stove was discovered on the fourth floor of the building occupied by Cobb's restaurant, Scollay square, by Patrolman Shaw of the City Hall avenue station.

Had Tuberculosis, —Now Insured

When you know a man has been afflicted with consumption, and later obtained insurance, it means that he has recovered his health, or in this case—

642 Sterling Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Gentlemen:—I was troubled with night sweats, a severe cough and was very weak; having, in fact, absolutely no strength whatever. I consulted a physician, who told me my lungs were affected. He satisfied, I went to another doctor, who told that I was in the first stages of consumption. At this point I started to take Eckman's Alterative. the night sweats stopped almost immediately; my cough left; I regained strength and gradually disappeared. My weight is now 142 pounds, and my physician has pronounced me perfectly sound—well. Together with the fact that I have just been accepted by two different insurance companies for insurance, makes me sure of my entire recovery." (Attested.)

(Affidavit) W. E. GEE.

Eckman's Alterative is most efficacious in bronchial catarrh, and severe throat and lung affections after exhausting the ordinary remedies and failing. Contains no opium, cocaine, nor other habit forming drugs. Obtainable from druggists. Small size, $1; usual size, $2. Sold by leading druggists. Write for booklet of recoveries.

DO YOU WANT TO SEE CALIFORNIA?

Do you want to see California? The Boston AMERICAN offers YOU an opportunity to take a DE LUXE trip to the Pacific Coast and the two great Expositions, with every expense paid for by this newspaper.

Are you interested? You should be!

You will find the complete details of this wonderful offer elsewhere in this paper. Such a chance may never come again.

Why not take advantage of it NOW?

Among the hard working candidates is John T. Kennedy of No. 662 Tremont street, Boston. He says:

"I certainly shall leave nothing undone to insure a place for myself on the Boston AMERICAN'S DE LUXE train to the Pacific Coast. It is certainly worth any effort."

Gaiety Theatre.

Capacity audiences welcomed the Bowery Burlesquers at the Gaiety Theatre at both performances yesterday. This Hurtig & Seamon attraction is headed by those two well-known performers Fitzgerald and Quinn, while the feminine contingent is led by that well known beauty Maybelle Morgan. The main burlesque is entitled, "The Plain Clothes Man," and is a good laugh maker. It is in two acts and is followed by a ridiculous farce called "A Trial on Trial."

Eddie Fitzgerald and Jack Quinn make a lively team and with Bobby Harrington, Charles Jansen and Fred Gardner have little difficulty in keeping their audiences in good humor.

Maybelle Morgan is an attractive woman, whose personality and pleasing vocal work win an audience from the start. Flo Davis is a peppery young miss, who keeps herself much in evidence all the time. She is a very clever dancer and every number that she leads is a riot.

Coming to Colonial.

William Collier and George M. Cohan are the central figures of a beauty show conspicuous for its pretty girls which will be seen at the Colonial Theatre next week. "Hello Broadway" proved the talk of New York when it was given at the Metropolis, and the chance of seeing two such stars as Mr. Collier and Mr. Cohan in one production made one of the big theatrical bargains of the year.

Have you seen California—that wonderful land of perpetual sunshine?

Twenty-five people from New England are going there this Summer as the guests of the Boston American on a DE LUXE trip, traveling like millionaires, with all their expenses paid.

Wouldn't you like to be one of the twenty-five. It's not only possible for you to go, it's easy, and if you don't take advantage of this chance of a lifetime, you will regret it.

You may never have an opportunity like this again to see the wonders of the glorious, golden west and the two greatest, grandest and most colossal expositions the world has ever seen.

Twenty-five DE LUXE trips—and $1,250 in gold will be awarded by the Boston American.

The American offers YOU a chance to win a DE LUXE trip to this wonderful land FREE AND $50 in gold besides. Can you afford to let this opportunity escape you? Isn't this the chance you have been waiting for? You will never forget this trip all your life. It will be your most cherished memory for years to come, and will be a trip that for luxury, comfort, pleasure and charm is unexcelled.

Remember, every thing will be paid for by the Boston American—railroad fares—berths and standard Pullman steel sleeping cars—meals and dinners en route and at hotels—auto sight-seeing trips, including Denver, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles and dozens of other points of interest—accommodations at the most luxurious hotels, admissions to both fairs—in short, every possible necessary expense.

Do you want to be one of the twenty-five? If so, don't lose a minute, but get busy today among your friends, relatives and acquaintances—everyone, in fact, whom you ever knew—and ask them to buy the Boston American during the term of this competition, and to save for YOU the vote coupons appearing each day.

That's all there is to it! There are no strings to this offer! There are no subscriptions or cash to collect! The one and only way to get vote credit is through the coupons printed in the Daily and Sunday American.

Here, in a nutshell, is the entire vote plan—read it carefully—then ask yourself if the requirements could possibly be more simple. The twenty-five marvelous tours are ready and waiting—why don't YOU decide that YOU will be ONE of the twenty-five to go?

Every day during the life of the contest, beginning Saturday, March 27, 1915, and ending Saturday, July 3, 1915, a coupon will appear in the Daily and Sunday American which will count for votes.

The Daily American coupon will count ONE vote, and the Sunday-American coupon will count TEN votes.

The contest will be divided into 7 periods, and the coupons, during each period, will be numbered in series as follows:

1st period — Series A No. 1 to A No. 15—appearing March 27 to April 10
2d period — Series B No. 1 to B No. 15—appearing April 11 to April 25
3d period — Series C No. 1 to C No. 15—appearing April 26 to May 10
4th period — Series D No. 1 to D No. 15—appearing May 11 to May 25
5th period — Series E No. 1 to E No. 15—appearing May 26 to June 9
6th period — Series F No. 1 to F No. 15—appearing June 10 to June 24
7th period — Series G No. 1 to G No. 9—appearing June 25 to July 3

DOUBLE VOTE VALUE will be given for each consecutive SERIES turned in within one week after the appearance of the last coupon in each SERIES. For example: A set of (A) coupons numbered "Series A, No. 1" to "Series A No. 15" inclusive will count as 66 votes, if received in one package as directed below, whereas 13 daily and 2 Sunday coupons not consecutively numbered will count as only 23 votes (their face value). But in any event all the coupons must be turned in within the set time limit. For example: ALL (A) coupons must be turned in not later than 5 P. M., April 17. ALL (A) coupons received after this date and time will be refused; a similar rule applies to the other six SERIES.

Votes sent in daily during each period will count only for their face value.

Votes cannot be transferred from one contestant to another after receipt of same by the American.

The vote value of coupons will remain unchanged throughout the entire contest.

BILLY SUNDAY RAKES NEW YORK MINISTERS OVER THE HOT COALS

PATERSON, N. J., April 20.—Billy Sunday turned baseball reporter for a couple of hours yesterday afternoon and "covered" a game between the Giants and the Phillies for the AMERICAN. The Giants lost.

Billy, who is an ex-ball player himself, witnessed the game from a box just behind the Giants' dug-out and nothing escaped his reportorial eye. While he was busy keeping score in the sixth inning Manager McGraw walked over toward the evangelist's box and waved the latter a greeting. Whereupon Billy leaped out onto the field and cordially shook McGraw's hand. The incident was cheered by the big crowd present.

After thus exchanging greeting with McGraw, Billy picked up one of the several bats lying on the ground nearby and "hefted" it with satisfaction. While he then proceeded to bat out some imaginary "fungo," the crowd began to josh him, whereupon he "hit the back trail" to his box.

After the game Billy addressed the New York ministers at Calvary Church, West Seventy-fifth street, later sit dinner at the Hotel Navarre and finally wound up a busy day in Gotham by calling on Mrs. J. Finley Shepherd (Helen Gould), at Lindhurst.

GOES RIGHT AT THEM.

Not until late Saturday night did Sunday finally agree to address the New York clergymen and theological students, and when he got through with them yesterday he had them gasping.

The church was packed to the doors and hundreds were turned away. From the start he threw a way kid gloves and just banged at them straight from the shoulder. In five minutes he had the dignified crowd of critics thumping the backs of the pews and cheering. Not satisfied with the room in the pulpit behind the rail, Sunday walked down the aisle among them and shouted and waved his arms over their heads.

"Some of you don't like my mannerisms. Well, I don't like yours," he shouted. "We're even there."

He leaped suddenly into a chair.

"There is one thing I want you to get at the start," he shouted. "I wouldn't walk across the street for a call to New York. When God wants me to come here I'll be here and not until then.

"Now for you fellows.

"You've been putting the church of Jesus Christ to sleep.

"The people are too self-satisfied. The churches are too orthodox. Because you go to church once a week you think you're going straight to heaven. You're going straight to hell.

"We're doing it all now by 'trusting in God.' Why, we put 'In God We Trust' on all our coins. That's all hot air.

A RABID ORTHODOX.

"The rankest thing that ever struck this country was the Congress of Religions out there in Chicago. As if the Buddhists and the Confucianists, and the Mohammedans and all the rest of them had something we haven't got, and should acquire, and we had something we want to eliminate.

"I'm rabidly orthodox. Some of you don't like my way of speech. Well, I don't think yours amounts to much. You want to lay on easy when I'm telling those other fellow's religion. You want me to put the soft pedal on Christian Science.

"Not half the church members have ever been converted. Not half of them have experienced the blessing of service and given themselves unreservedly to God. Why, it would take 40,000 Gabriels with trumpets to rouse half of them. Half of them are going to hell and the sooner the better.

"I've got no time to spend on this higher criticism and advanced thought and new ideas concerning Jesus Christ and salvation. You listen to a lot of fellows preaching the gospel today and you can't tell whether man came from a zoological garden or the Garden of Eden. Take your monkey ancestors and go to the devil with them.

"The road to heaven is not through Harvard or Yale or Princeton or Pennsylvania. It's through the red blood of Jesus. You don't take the miracles away from the Bible. If you take away the miracles you take away Christ.

AN APOLOGY DUE.

"They say we were all hegotten of God. I don't believe it. We are all creatures. To be of the flesh of God you've got to believe in Christ. We need a new article in our creed—that we believe in hell, but quite h-e-l-l. I'm going to stand right here and tell the world, 'Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved.' I'm going to stick right to the old-fashioned religion and tell it to them just as I get it from this book, and let the monkey preachers and the high and new thoughters and the theosophists and Christian Scientists all go to hell in their several ways.

"Sit down and examine yourselves. Is your church evangelistic? Any church that is not evangelistic owes God and the world an apology. The church that is not evangelistic is a church on ice. There never was a time when the people were more hungry for God than they are right now. What are you doing to lead them to Him?

"What are you doing to shake up your own congregation? Have you told that old drunken bum down there in the front pew that he's a disgrace to the church, or have you been afraid to because he's one of your leading members?

"You may call a polecat a guinea-pig, but it stinks just the same."

The last words aptly described its "Amen" and pounded on the backs of the pews.

TOLD TO "GO ON."

"I thank God that I have never been called to be a pastor of a church," he continued, "for I'll buy a return ticket. I'm not one of those higher criticism fellows. I never preached that. But I thank God I've held firm. I'm not afraid of being called untrue. I'm rabidly orthodox, but I'm not a back number. I'm the most up-to-date fellow you ever met. It's keeping the devil walking mighty lively to keep even with me. There are lots of fellows who can preach the gospel better than I do, but there aren't any of them can preach a better gospel."

He slammed together the covers of his Bible and stopped.

"Go on, go on," cried the ministers.

A HOME RECIPE
That Stops Dandruff

If you are troubled with excessive dandruff either dry or oily it is possible that the following recipe which can be easily prepared at home from simple materials will be of great benefit, as by its use thousands of people have driven dandruff from their scalps forever.

Mix together in an 8 oz. bottle, 6 oz. of a good quality of Bay Rum, 2 oz. of Lavona de Compowne and add ½ drachm, Menthol Crystals. Shake well and allow to stand for an hour before using.

You can get all the above ingredients from any druggist. The best way to apply is night and morning, briskly rubbing into the scalp with finger tips or a medium stiff brush. The one 8 oz. bottle should be in most cases sufficient to clear the head of all dandruff and excessive itching thereafter should effectively prevent its return. This treatment is also excellent for making the hair grow and to keep the hair from falling out and although not a stain or dye, will often restore natural color to gray, streaked or faded hair

ZOE

A Thrilling Serial of Love and Mystery

"Many a time has she sat over there at my piano."

SYNOPSIS.

Noel Crawley, a successful painter, in London, has painted the portrait of a beautiful woman whom he knows only as Zoe. She appears after his engagement is announced and tries to kill herself in his studio. Finally she leaves swearing she will commit suicide the day he marries.

After she goes Crawley has a visit from Godfrey Brooke, traveller, financier and empire builder, just back from Africa. Brooke says he had been good friends when both were poor in Paris. Brooke had married Diana Melhuish, and after two years' absence was now on the way to his country house to see the bride he had left. Crawley tells Brooke all about Zoe, and also that he is engaged to Eva Warren.

(By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN.)

"WHAT Brooke, for, so far, he had not found a satisfactory solution to Crawley's acute depression of spirit. So far the story was most ordinary. He knew of half a dozen other affairs of precisely the same nature where Crawley was concerned.

"I've never given her a penny," said Crawley. "That's one of the strange things about her. She would never take a present of any sort."

"Extraordinary woman!" said Brooke.

"Obviously she was very well off," said Crawley.

"Where did she live?"

"Don't even know," replied the artist. "She used to like playing at the game of mystery. She was just Zoe to me—Zoe and nothing more. Mark you, Brooke—she was a most brilliant woman. She had traveled and read and she could talk well. She spoke two or three languages. She played and sang divinely. Many a time she has sat over there at my piano and sung little French and German songs to me by the hour together. And yet—well, she sat to me for my 'Circe.'"

FINEST THING HE HAD EVER DONE

"Haven't seen it," said Brooke. "Where is it?"

"I sold it last week to Leveredge. Got a thousand down for it. It's the finest thing I've ever done. That picture is going to make me. It will be exhibited at the Leveredge Gallery in Bond street next week. Admission, one shilling. So you'll be able to look in and see it. Yes, she's my 'Circe.' Well, things went on more or less in the same way. She went away sometimes for a week or two and I never heard from her; but never for long.

"Of course I liked her in a way, you know—in a certain way. She was so beautiful, and I love all beautiful things; and then she was such a charming companion; and altogether there was an air of danger and romance about it all which appealed to me strongly. Personally, though, I should have been quite content to regard her as a model, as a beautiful picture or anything you like, but no man can hold out long if a woman makes a dead set at him as Zoe did. She was a regular furnace of passion.

"Of course, I made love to her after a fashion. I should have been more than human had I not. I said all sorts of foolish things, some incredibly foolish things, some I don't dare say, I mean at the time—who knows? I'm a fearful fool. She used to swear to me that I was the only man in her life, and that she belonged to me body and soul, and all that."

"Poor woman!" said Brooke gently. "It seems to me, Crawley, that you weren't doing quite the right thing."

"Don't mince matters," said Crawley bitterly. "I was a cad."

"Yes; I think you were. But what happened?"

Crawley shrugged his thin shoulders. "Oh, Heaven knows! I can't tell her I loved her, I suppose. In fact, I was too serious, but then she was such a woman. Then—well, then I met Eva."

SHE WAS MERELY A BEAUTIFUL MODEL

"So you dropped 'Circe,' I suppose?"

"Not altogether," answered Crawley. "I couldn't. Besides, she wouldn't be dropped. And then, you know, there was the picture. I had to finish that. So, as far as I was concerned, she merely occupied her original place in my mind—a beautiful model."

"Did you tell her so?"

"Not in so many words."

"Or tell her anything about Miss Warren?"

"No. Why should I? She lives in a different world. I never discussed my private affairs with her. She never discussed hers. We made a sort of world of our own."

"I know those exclusive worlds," said Brooke, cynically. "They are often very difficult to get out of. However——"

"A few days ago," Crawley went on, "I asked Miss Warren to marry me. She consented. I believe she loves me, although I'm not worthy to lick her dear little shoes. Sir Squire and Lady Warren were very affable about it. From that moment I had to be pretty firm with Zoe. She guessed something was up, but said nothing. Fortunately she had to go out of town for a few weeks. I bade her good-bye. She was fearfully cut up and swore eternal faith and all that."

"And what next?"

"Nothing till this afternoon—this very afternoon, Brooke." Crawley shivered and swept his long white hand across his eyes. "It was a hideous business. I shall never get over it. She came here. It was about 4 o'clock. She was fearfully excited and overwrought, and altogether hysterical. She knew that I was going to Paris tomorrow for a few days, and she begged me to take her with me. She said that she could not live without me, and all that sort of thing. So my slave, do anything if I would take her away. I reminded her of her husband. It was weak, I know, because I never believed and don't believe now that there ever was a husband."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

WOMAN REFUSES OPERATION

Tells How She Was Saved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Louisville, Ky.—"I think if more suffering women would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound they would enjoy better health. I suffered from a female trouble, and the doctors decided I had a tumorous growth and would have to be operated upon, but I refused as I do not believe in operations. I had fainting spells, bloated, and could hardly stand the pain in my left side. My husband insisted that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am so thankful I did, for I am now a well woman. I sleep better, do all my housework and take long walks. I never fail to praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my good health."—Mrs. J. M. RASCH, 1900 West Broadway, Louisville, Ky.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

Their Married Life

Helen Gets a Further Proof of the Thoughtfulness of Warren

Copyright, 1916, by International News Service.

NORA greeted Helen with tearful eyes as they all stormed the door at once.

"Is everything all right, Nora?" questioned Helen anxiously peering around at all the things she had missed for so long.

"Yes, Nora, was anything stolen?" said Warren scathingly. "Where is the cat?"

"Oh, yes, is Pussy Purr Mew all right, Nora," said Helen. "Where is she?"

"In the kitchen, Ma'am, I'll get her."

"Get something good for lunch, Nora?" called Warren after her as she left the room.

Nora flushed good naturedly at Warren's bantering tone.

"Asparagus soup, some fruit salad, and strawberry shortcake," she recited glibly, "Mrs. Curtis' mother arranged things."

"How long have you been here, mother? Just think! there was so much to say that I haven't asked you before now."

"A couple of days. Don't you notice how clean everything looks? Nora's better come in your room and take off your things."

Helen followed her mother into her room and gasped delightedly. The low window sill was banked with daffodils and the sun was pouring through on them so that the room looked like a Spring garden.

"Where did they come from?" she said, burying her face in their cool fragrance.

"Warren asked me to have flowers here, and I love daffodils in the Spring. There's a lot of mail for you out on the table."

Helen began unpacking her little handbag and now began to take down her hair. She ran into the bathroom and talked to her mother from there as she splashed in the refreshing water, then she hastily twisted up her hair and slipped into a fresh shirt waist. She was dabbing powder vigorously on her face when Warren came in.

"This looks something like it," he said sniffing. "Mother, you certainly are a great one. They're great!"

"And you were a dear," said Helen impulsively. "Warren, I never know you to be so thoughtful."

WARREN ANXIOUS FOR A SATISFYING MEAL

"I just proves that I can be if I want to. I'm hungry. Wonder if Nora isn't nearly ready."

"I'll go out and see," said Helen's mother, rising with the intuitive notion that they would like to be alone.

"Warren," said Helen going up to him, and taking the lapels of his coat in her hands in a way she had, "I never can thank you. Just think, you knew all this while I was raving and making some one to meet me."

Warren grinned and took her hands in his for a moment.

"Glad to be back?"

"Yes; aren't you? Doesn't everything look pretty?"

"You bet." He slipped his arm around her for a moment and she snuggled up close to him. Then the door was pushed open and Winifred appeared.

"Here's Pussy," she said gravely, proffering the cat to Helen, who laughed merrily and clasped her.

Pussy Purr Mew had been playing in the coal and the edges of her long ruff were suspiciously smirched with black, as was the blue ribbon how that was fastened coquettishly to her little silver collar. She looked at Helen imploringly, who stooped and patted her between the eyes, and then sent Winifred out to the kitchen with her. The sound of Nora's indignant voice and the accompanying sound of a meal in preparation was borne to Helen from the kitchen, and then Winifred trotted back obediently to be tidied up for lunch.

Helen hurried out to the living room, and lovingly touched all her cherished belongings. Everything was just as she had left it, and she went out into the dining room to see how near things were ready.

"It seems so strange to get back and keep house again," she said, happily. "It all seems too good to be true, I feel so happy."

"Everything is just about ready, and Helen, if you want to tell Warren, Nora needn't ring the gong. You can bring your mail with you and read it between courses."

A LARGE LOT OF MAIL WAITING TO BE READ

"I had forgotten about the mail. All right, mother, we'll be right in."

In the living room a pile of mail was lying on the table. Warren was sorting this as she came in.

"Eight letters," he said, holding them up as she came in. "And I don't know how many cards. Did you know the Stevens were in Florida?"

"No, dear, but I expected them to go South sometime this Winter."

"Well, come on," said Warren, as she stopped to examine some of her mail, "that is, if lunch is ready."

"Yes, I came in to tell you," said Helen and then walked into the dining room.

"I don't feel as if I could ever be cross about anything again," said Helen as she tasted her soup. "Why Nora, I never knew you could make such delicious asparagus soup. Is this something new?"

"From a recipe of mine," said her mother, as Nora blushed and smiled at the praise, and then there was silence as they all ate hungrily.

"I tell you, home cooking tastes different from the stuff they give you on board the ship," said Warren, as they were waiting for the salad, and then he gave a whoop of laughter and held up a card for Helen to see. "Do you recognize the writing?" he said merrily. The writing was the fine feminine writing of the mysterious letter, and Helen laughed and blushed furiously.

She could consider it a joke now, but it had been serious enough once.

Brought Back the Spirit

A certain Scotsman, on taking his mother in a hearse to be buried in a churchyard situated in the wilds of Scotland, came home with the hearse full of barrels of smuggled whiskey.

On a friend chaffing him over the matter, he remarked:

"Man, it was no harm. I only took away the body and brought back the spirit."

YOU'LL GET RID OF BLACKHEADS SURE

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads and that is to dissolve them.

To do this get about two ounces of plain powdered saxonin from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet sponge—rub over the blackheads briskly—soak the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. The blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear, leaving the parts without any black specks. Blackheads are simply a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions from the body that form in the pores of the skin. Pinching and squeezing only causes irritation, make large pores and do not get the blackheads out after they become hard. The medicated saxonin and the water slowly dissolve the blackheads so that come right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition. Anyone can now get rid of these unsightly blackheads without trouble, for this simple method.—Advertisement.

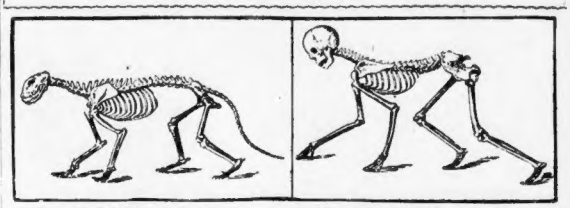
The Man and the Tiger

Look at These Skeletons and See How Like They Are



The anatomical likeness between man and the tiger—a remarkable comparison by Prof. Bonnier. The two illustrations here given are intended, in a measure, to prove his theory.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

IF you put the skeleton of a man and the skeleton of a tiger side by side, and bring the former down upon all fours, as Professor Bonnier has done in his book on "The Descent of Man," you get a startling visual argument in favor of the evolutionary theory of man's origin from lower forms of life.

Tiger and man are both vertebrates, or back-boned animals. To the expert eye of the anatomist many important variations between them are visible at a glance, but to the ordinary observer, looking hastily, the likeness seems to far exceed the difference.

The general plan is the same. Backbone, linking the whole system of bones together, like the keel of a ship; neck, sustaining the head; skull, enclosing the brain; four limbs, for locomotion and manipulation; a cage of rib-bones, to protect the lungs and other vital organs—all these things are common, not only to the tiger and the man, but to many other forms of vertebrate animals. The likeness goes still further, and includes many physiological functions, when we compare the various vertebrates that fall under the classification of mammals, or animals which nourish their young with their own milk. This includes all warm-blooded quadrupeds, an astonishing circumstance in showing how vast is the circle of human relationship!

When nature got ready to produce man she evidently had all the necessary anatomical and physiological plans, materials and mechanisms handy in her workshop. She had no fundamental experiments to try. Legs, arms, lungs, heads, vertebræ, ribs, muscles, eyes, ears, swivel-joints, sockets, fingers, toes, stomachs and nerves, had all been tested and standardized, and she had only to make certain adjustments and variations in order to produce an improvement on her monkeys and apes, which she had already started off on that particular branch of evolution on which man was to render so glorious. It really looks as though man was the result of a sudden, happy thought.

Nature had been working, for millions of years, with a very wonderful material, nervous tissue, which possessed properties which, one could almost imagine, surprised nature herself.

She dealt with it some times in a glingerly way, as if she were distrustful of it. When she began to collect it in batteries, so to speak, it showed marvellous powers. She hardly seems to have known what to do with it at first. Once she put a nerve-battery in the middle of the long backbone of the huge, lumbering monster called Stegosaurus, but left him with his head poorly furnished. It was no place for a brain, as she quickly discovered. Then she put it where it belonged, in the skull of a four-limbed, climbing creature, whose rapid advance convinced her of the value of wits to an animal. The hint was out. Henceforth man was in the air of invention. He was sure to arrive.

If we look back at the skeletons of the tiger and the man, we see just one vast and manifest difference between them, and that is found in the head or skull. The comparison is amazing. Low brutality speaks from one of those bony cases, and high intelligence from the other. Yet the skeletal bones of the two creatures, excepting the skulls, are so like in appearance and in the functions they have to perform that, if you cut off the head and tail, you might think that it was Hobson's choice as to which was the better animal.

The human characteristics are imprinted on the man's skeleton, but one can see that they are the result of habit and adjustment. The man has learned, or been impelled, to walk erect, and his backbone has in consequence acquired a different curvature than that of the tiger's. Many of his other bones and jointings have been varied to suit his special needs, but no logical mind can escape the conviction that his anatomical structure was contrived for other animals long before he appeared, and that when he came he had to take up with the general plan that already existed for all vertebrates, which was simply modified and worked over to give him a better fit.

The only thing that underwent a separate and altogether novel development was, anatomically, the skull, and physiologically, the brain. The whole central idea of man as distinguished from the lower animals is there. A question of overpowering and universal interest remains: When the gift of an almost infinitely superior brain was bestowed upon the human species, did another and incomparably greater gift accompany it, viz: an independent spirit, temporarily inhabiting this superior body, but not subject to its mortality?

The new Egyptian flag consists of three white crescents with their backs to the staff, each with a five-pointed white star between the horns on a red field. One of the evils of war is the lowering of the national physique. In the agitation over the Franco-German War there was an appreciable decrease in the stature of French men, through the large number of young men of good physique who were killed.

MEDFORD MAYOR LEADS 'WET' RAID

Mayor Haines of Medford, the chief of police and fifteen patrolmen arrested four men and two women in a spectacular liquor raid, and captured two automobiles full of "wet stuff."

The Mayor was compelled to draw his revolver on one of the prisoners, who, he said, was trying to flee.

The Mayor said policemen went to the scene in several machines. It was planned to start the raid, which was to be made in all the houses at the same time, by means of a set of signals operated on the automobile horns.

The Mayor was the signal man. While waiting for results, the Mayor caught sight of a man fleeing. He drew his revolver, and put the fugitive under arrest.

Those who were in the raids said they were: Frank Allaro and John Allard brothers, No 24 Lambert street, Louis Bois, No 42 Linden street, Eugene Iuliffe No 14 Linden street, Victoria Angelo, No 424 Riverside avenue, and Anna Donnellie, of Hall avenue. They were all charged with keeping and exposing intoxicants and were released on bail.

A FINE TREATMENT FOR CATARRH

EASY TO MAKE AND COSTS LITTLE

If you have catarrh don't be maimed or misled into believing you can obtain a cure for your trouble by breathing a simple medicated air.

Catarrh is a constitutional disease, and inhalers, sprays and nose douches merely temporize with the disease and when over, bring any lasting benefit. To effect a cure use a remedy that will drive the disease out of your system. Don't employ a remedy that will drive the disease down into your lungs and bronchial tubes. Such methods often lead to consumption, and frequently produce catarrhal deafness and head noises.

If you have catarrh in any form go to your druggist and get one ounce of Parmint (double strength), take it home and add to it ½ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar, stir until dissolved. Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

The first dose should begin to relieve the most miserable headache, dullness, stopping and stuffed running of the nose, catarrhal discharges, head noises and other loathsome symptoms that always accompany this disgusting disease.

Parmint, definitive hearing and success is guaranteed in the case of the Parmint are other remedies that show the worst of catarrh and it can be overcome by the use of this simple catarrhal. Every person who has catarrh should give the prescription a trial. There is nothing else.

VILLA ROUTED; ARMY FLEEING

By International News Service

EL PASO, Texas, April 20.—General Francisco Villa, commander-in-chief of the Conventionist army of 20,000, was crushingly defeated at the battle of Celaya, and the remnants of his shattered forces have reached Aguas Calientes.

In close pursuit of the northern leader is General Alvaro Obregon, the Carrancista commander.

In Obregon's arms are more than 20,000 trained troops. Villa's forces have halted at Aguas Calientes to prepare defences for a last stand against the northward march of the Carrancistas troops.

Confirmation of Villa's signal defeat has been received in this city by not only the Carrancista agency, but the Villa representatives on the border as well.

From details of the battle which have reached here, indications are that the star of the northern leader has set and that for all he can do to prevent it the Carrancista faction will predominate in Mexico, for the time being at least.

VILLA ORDERS ATTACK.

Five thousand fresh troops arrived at Celaya last Sunday from Vera Cruz by way of Pachuca to reinforce Obregon. Villa, unaware that his opponent had been strengthened, ordered a general attack on the fortified city and threw practically his whole force into the onslaught.

The struggle that ensued, according to reports, resembled a massacre more than a battle, and Villa's men were hurled back, with heavy losses, estimated at not less than 8,000 men.

They were forced to retire to a point fifteen miles north of Celaya, where Villa reorganized his brigades.

A second attack was launched Monday morning. It was even more unfortunate than the first. Flushed with victory, Obregon's troops met the attackers outside their protected positions and dealt them a more crushing blow than the one added Sunday.

VILLA NEAR DEATH.

Villa himself, according to unofficial reports, barely escaped with his life. What portion of his army he saved is not known, but indications are that he lost fully 10,000 in the last week of fighting.

Villa shot down several of his own officers who were fleeing with their panic-stricken commands. No personal exertion on his part could halt the retreat of his fear-crazed army and for the first time in his career he tasted the bitter cup of a crushing defeat.

Telegrams from Villa at Aguas Calientes to Juarez military officials said that Villa had placed his artillery commander, General Felipe Angeles, under arrest for insubordination. The message reads:

"Angeles drew up a plan of attack against Celaya, which I refused to follow, and when Obregon with his strong position and superior numbers, struck terror into the hearts of my men, Angeles in a rage entered my car and said that if I had followed his advice a different tale would have been told. I had him locked up for insubordination."

Four Boston sisters have just met in a unique reunion at Pinehurst. They are wealthy members of the Sinclair family. To celebrate their reunion—for the three married sisters live away from Boston, they have had their photographs taken in a group.

The sisters are Mrs. P. W. Whitmore, Mrs. S. M. Merrill, Mrs. J. C. Spring and Miss Ellen Marie Sinclair. The last named has gained fame as a poetess, and is the only woman member of the Boston Yacht Club. She is an excellent rifle shot, and has won distinction in athletics.

HAIL GARDNER AS GENEROUS 'SMITH'

George A. Gardner, eighty-six, of No. 51 Commonwealth avenue, stands revealed today the mysterious "Mr. Smith," about whose identity there has been much conjecture since his gift through Mayor Curley to the aid of the employed became known.

He attended the municipal exercises at Marine Park, South Boston, to view the balustrade, extending from the Headhouse to Castle Island, for the building of which by the unemployed he gave the city $5,000. Fully 20,000 persons thronged the park anxious to learn the name of the donor.

"Within the next two years," Mayor Curley said, "we propose to spend not less than $500,000 in making South Boston water front the most inviting in the United States. We will beautify Broadway and Dorchester avenue to Farragut road and we will whitesand the beach and make it a most delightful place for mothers and children."

Mayor Curley then presented Mr Gardner

The Annual Sale of SPRING SUITS for Women and Misses

Presenting values which no prospective suit-buyer can afford to overlook

WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, FRIDAY

¶ We are in the midst of one of the busiest suit seasons it has ever been our good fortune to know.

¶ So active has been the selling of our excellent regular stocks at regular prices, that we seriously considered postponing this annual special price event until some later date.

¶ Second thought, however, showed us that it would be more in accord with the Filene custom to distribute the prize suits here after weeks of planning and work, at the time when the larger number of persons might benefit. Hence, the sale Wednesday and following days.

The early and active suit business helped us to make the sale items more attractive than ever, by showing us just what were the most wanted styles. A study of the pictures will prove how we have made use of this advance information.

The short coats, the many buttons, the belts, the braid, the popular navy-and-white combination, the shepherd checks—all THE touches of the season are found on one or the other of the suits sketched.

The large volume of business we have been able to place with suit manufacturers at regular prices, gave us a strong leverage in dealing with them for the super-values required for this annual sale.

Placing the orders for the sale suits with these tried and known makers assures tailoring and finish such as we wish our customers to associate with the Filene name.

We start the sale with a goodly supply of each of the suits sketched in all regular sizes. Special orders will be taken for any size or color that may be sold out before Friday night. Every precaution will be taken to make sure that our service in this sale, both in selling and in fitting, holds up to our regular high standard. In every way, it is our aim to make this event one that will be remembered with pleasure, and looked forward to.

The $550 Player Pianos for 397.50 Each Are Proving the Sensation of the Sale

The Player Pianos are selling even faster than the pianos —and they should

Because—

We've applied the same liberal plan of selling to Player Pianos that we do on the pianos and—

We've done far more than that—we've priced these splendid Player Pianos at only $152.50 more than the Pianos (the usual price is double), and—

You can pay as little as $2.50 a week after the first payment.

The strongest guarantee ever put on a piano also applies to these Player Pianos.

These are the cold facts that are making this sale the talk of the city.

Selling Player Pianos under these conditions is unusual. Think of buying these splendid New England made instruments at such a price, and of paying for them at the rate of $2.50 a week. It's unheard of, it's no wonder that the news of it has spread the length and breadth of the State, and that we're selling pianos and player pianos as fast as we can wait on the customers.

It is the Splendid Instruments themselves that are making this sale so big

Backed by the strongest guarantee and the most liberal terms of payment ever known in the piano trade on instruments of like value.

The whole proposition repeated in short sentences

¶ A lot of unnecessary "war talk," "hard times," jingoism and calamity howling caused a lot of people to "put off" buying a piano.

¶ He was willing to sell his splendid instruments at bare cost to keep his factory running.

¶ We knew if people could buy those splendid New England made pianos for less money than they had ever known before—on terms that wouldn't strain any purse—they would buy NOW.

The Pianos are here, worth $350 each, for $229.75 each.

After the First Payment — Pay Only $1.25 A WEEK

Backed by the strongest guarantee that we know how to write. And after the first payment you can pay only $1.25 a week.

It's working out just as we expected it would. There's never been such response to a piano sale.

From all over the State are coming inquiries, and the enthusiasm is contagious. It's worth coming to see even if you haven't a piano-buying thought in your mind. You've never seen such splendid instruments at this price. You've never seen such buying.

Toodles Tells of Hat Bird Water in Chapeau Cage

Miss Bess Ryan and the hat she wears with a live canary in a gauze cage.

The bird on "Toodles" hat—the same being the live songster Bess Ryan of Ferncroft $50,000 heart suit fame wore in a gauze cage in a Fifth Avenue promenade—has been provided with all the comforts of home, a New York interview with Miss Ryan today reveals.

Miss Ryan, who portrays Fashion in the play "Experience" had this to say:

"This is the very latest novelty. It is going to be the big new fashion in New York for women to wear live birds on their heads. A leading modiste whose name I don't like to use without her permission, sent for me last week, and as she knows I play Fashion in 'Experience,' she wanted me to be the first to introduce the new style hats to Broadway. I agreed—and I wore the hat with the canary inside.

"It is a very ingenious arrangement. The top is fitted up like a cage. You put the bird in before you put on the hat, then close the bottom, and there you are. There is a tiny bottle of water in the cage for the bird to drink if it gets thirsty, and so arranged that the water cannot spill. I shall wear the hat again next Sunday."

JULIAN HAWTHORNE TELLS VIVID STORY OF HOW GREAT MARATHON RACE WAS WON

"Clean Living Won Willard the Title"

John L. Lauds New Heavyweight King

By JOHN L. SULLIVAN,
(Former Heavyweight Champion of the World.)

I have [illegible] the present [illegible] of the [illegible] and I [illegible] greatly impressed [illegible] big man and [illegible] what impressed [illegible] all.

Willard [illegible] he looks, [illegible] if he had not [illegible] of a title. He [illegible] and Wolgast [illegible] of champions [illegible] the strain [illegible] roughly [illegible] that he [illegible] people like.

Willard [illegible] champion [illegible] and I [illegible] a chance [illegible] come.

I looked Willard [illegible] carefully [illegible] and saw him [illegible] stripped [illegible] every movement [illegible] and I have decided [illegible] as a champion.

Willard Is the Most Popular Man in World.

I met Willard for the first time at his hotel and talked with him for a long time. I [illegible] to him my many experiences in the ring. I told him what was what in my days and advised him what to do to become the greatest heavyweight champion we have ever had. Willard listened to me and when I got through, he said: "John you might be sure I will [illegible] and I [illegible] what I [illegible] to become champion."

Willard [illegible] the most popular man in [illegible] by winning back the championship for the [illegible]. People have for a long time awaited for some white man to defeat Jack Johnson.

Willard told me that he intends to [illegible] and I believe [illegible] straight [illegible] his ring [illegible] He [illegible] champion, go by the beards [illegible] account of the [illegible] the public [illegible] I will [illegible] That is what he wants to do [illegible] Willard [illegible] and no [illegible] and [illegible] that he [illegible] and [illegible]

Wonderful Build for Heavyweight Champion.

Willard [illegible] make [illegible] test [illegible] him, and I hope that he will make a lot of money in his exhibitions and theatrical work.

Willard has a most wonderful build for a heavyweight champion. His size is all to his advantage. And what a wonderful reach he has! He is strong, has a good pair of legs and arms, and from what I have seen of him, I believe that he knows how to use them.

He stands up well and by so doing gets full benefit of his great reach. He [illegible] and [illegible] well put together [illegible] appears as if he can take a lot of punishment.

"It was a [illegible] addition to [illegible] heavyweight champion, [illegible] Willard to me at the hotel, 'and I want to be a worthy one. I trained hard and studied boxing ever since Johnson won the title from Jim Jeffries out in Reno.

"Now that I have won the title I want to show people that I am a real champion. I have been struck by hundreds since I won the title down in Havana, but I have never told me more than a few words [illegible] any other man, and I will carry out your bit of advice to a letter."

John L. Says Willard Must Leave Booze Alone.

The way Willard spoke those words appealed to me. He meant every word he said.

I made it plain to Willard that I do not [illegible] booze a [illegible] I have seen [illegible] athletes, including [illegible] champion, go to the [illegible] account of booze. Booze is the enemy of every man, woman and child. You cannot indulge in booze and remain yourself. Not for a minute.

Willard has always lived out of doors, [illegible] away from the [illegible] nots and those who have seen him [illegible] well, understand why he is such a perfect [illegible]

[illegible] a great [illegible] with [illegible] Willard told me [illegible] he was [illegible] and [illegible] out on [illegible] a great man that his wife and family are always the first thought. Willard says he is tired of giving exhibitions and wants to get back to see his family [illegible] reaches home. He will be just as happy as the minute he won the heavyweight championship.

A Punch Will Carry Good Champion Through.

I have [illegible] Willard [illegible] but from [illegible] I [illegible] perfect [illegible] He [illegible] to [illegible] go in, stand up like a man and [illegible] till he can put across the winning punch and I'll say he is a good champion.

Fancy boxing does not appeal to me. The man with the punch won in my days, and Jess Willard should win many bouts with his great right hand punch.

I told Willard he should not box any negro boxers. He will make a great mistake by so doing. I have nothing against colored folks, but I do not believe in mixing between whites and blacks. Such bouts are likely to stir up much ill feeling and such a thing is bad for the game and everybody concerned.

Swell Heads Kill Public Characters.

Another thing I advised Willard about was not to get a swell head. You all know what I mean by it. A swell head kills public characters and it will kill any boxer, but I do not think that Willard will be one [illegible] Willard is not all [illegible] thinking about himself he is the [illegible] champion. His women [illegible] thought [illegible] and [illegible] even out on the Coast.

Willard is a man through [illegible] and from now on I will be [illegible] of his best little [illegible]

MARATHON STARS IN MATCH RACE

Edouard Fabre, the famous Montreal runner, who finished first in the classic B. A. A. Marathon, stated today that he has agreed to meet Clifton Horne of Everett in a special match race, to be held in Boston on July 4.

Horne gave the Canadian a merry battle for the high honors in the Unicorn tussle yesterday and they should prove a big attraction over the ten-mile route, as the Everett youth is at his best when performing at this distance.

After his race here in July, Fabre will start for California, where he will appear in several big events. The Montreal runner shows no ill effects of his great performance of yesterday, when he won the B. A. A. race in 2 hours, 31 minutes and 41 1-5 seconds.

Clifton Horne was second, while third honors were captured by Sidney Hatch of Chicago.

M'Loughlin May Not Try for Tennis Title

NEW YORK, April 20.—It is probable that two of the distinguished California tennis players—Maurice E. McLoughlin, hero of the Davis Cup matches, and Lindley Murray may not come East this season.

McLoughlin has notified members of the National Association that business affairs are likely to interfere with his competing for the championship. Murray has suffered an injury to the arches of his feet, which is necessitating his temporary retirement.

Dartmouth Has 42 Football Candidates

HANOVER, N. H., April 20.—The first day of Spring practice for Dartmouth varsity football candidates brought out forty-two men for a workout made light by exceptionally warm weather. With the exception of ten men, the squad was new material largely from the freshman class.

Langford-Flynn Hissed from Ring

MONTREAL, Que., April 20.—Amid hisses and groans of the hundreds who paid admission to Theatre Royal, Sam Langford, the colored baby, and Dan (Porky) Flynn of Boston were publicly belittled when they were ordered from the ring in the eighth round after making a fiasco of their bout.

Referee Pat Rooney decided the men were not trying and chased them from the arena.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE'S STORY OF THE MARATHON

Twenty-Mile Race Is Long Enough to Determine Winner, He Says

NOTED AUTHOR CALLS LONG GRIND A CRUEL TEST

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

French Canadians are hard to beat, and Edouard Fabre had all the toughness, wind and endurance of the northern wilderness in his gaunt and lean limbs and figure. As he turned the corner and straightened out for the finish, he picked himself up and came for the tape at a pace which would have seemed good at the end of five miles. As he drew near his broad smile almost reached out to the lines of spectators who crowded near on both sides, and there was no trace of weariness noticeable in his knotty limbs. Nor did his face appear pale and haggard, but there was a healthy ruddiness in his cheeks and his eyes were bright.

This freshness often marks the winner of the Marathon; it is due in part to the fact that he is fitter than the others for the struggle, and partly to the spirit which being in front inspires into a man. Those who follow after him are the sufferers. Also, the winner is free from obstacles which, in a race run under such conditions as are unavoidable when spectators are massed along the line, from start to finish, by the ten thousand, and when swarms of motor cars follow, precede and journey cheek by jowl with the contestants, perplex and hamper him at every step.

Marathon Is a Cruel Test.

This is a pity, no doubt; but the Marathon is, first of all, a great holiday spectacle, and though the runners are to be taken care of so far as possible, it is the public that must be considered first. The "time" suffers; but the time is not after all very important. We have come to the conclusion that Ryan's 2:21:18 1-5 is not likely to be bettered just at present; and for the rest all we want is to see the boys do the best they can. We want to see manhood and endurance, and the courage that fights its way through efforts that the body would deem insurmountable, and we see enough of these and to spare in a Marathon race.

But it is a cruel test, greater than any but a very few can sustain without injury. That five miles after the twenty is too much; and the last mile after the five is preposterous. Twenty miles is enough to determine the winner, the rest is a dead lift and a menace to vitality, which is not worth while to risk. Marathon winners are picked men, but their years of efficiency will be few.

Honoban a Sight for Sculptor.

The weather on this occasion was only too warm, but not so warm as to be dangerous. As our car followed along behind Honoban and Peres, the two New Yorkers, who led the rest during the first half and more of the course by from half to quarter of a mile, I noted that Honoban was sweating freely, though his build was light and slender, and his legs were a sight for a sculptor. None of the runners was of finer proportions than he; his short hair was jet black, and he ran easily and steadily, with arms swinging freely, the elbows bent at right angles. His face for the first hour or so was flushed; later it lost its high color; he often wiped the sweat from his eyes.

After sixteen miles he stopped sweating, and then his real test began, for he must now draw directly upon the muscular tissue itself. His motion was as easy as before, and the odds seemed quite in favor of his keeping up to the end; and yet, a short distance further on, he dropped all at once into a walk. Presently he ran again, then walked another stretch; he was doing the utmost he could, but if there were stronger men behind, he would be beaten.

There were three stronger, and just past twenty miles he was overtaken by Horne, the Yankee, who was somewhat of Fabre's build, and came up with a powerful stride. He looked as hard as hickory, but he was pale; he was probably a trifle overtrained. Honoban was too gritty to retire, as his partner did five miles before, and his perseverance got him fourth place in the finish.

But Fabre was now beginning to run; he had wisely saved himself till the last five miles, and he had a speed which Horne could not rival. It was a very stirring race at this period, but Fabre having once revealed himself, it was plain that nobody could pass him. On he came, amid the roaring crowds that thronged on either side, and in front of the terrible race of automobiles; the whole of Boston and its environs seemed to be there. He gained steadily and fast; when he breasted the tape no one else had hove in sight round the corner. He did not beat Ryan's time, but it does not follow that Ryan could have beaten him today.

Marathon of 140 Years Ago.

I stayed to watch the arrival of the next six or eight, each looking more tired than his predecessor. Honoban was fourth, and he was running not walking, but he was done. One or two of the following ones were dazed and wavering and had to be guided to the tape. The great Greek, Gianokopulos, did not arrive while I was there; he is a fine athlete, but too heavy for the Marathon. It is a cruel race, and doubly cruel for those who cannot win.

But for the people the day was ideal for a festival. The 19th of April never looked better; it was much the same sort of weather that greeted the British troops of King George Third who participated in the first American Marathon one hundred and forty years ago. In justice to those representatives of the British army, it should be said that though their time from Concord Bridge to Boston cannot begin to compare with even the slowest of our more recent contestants, yet we must not forget that they did not begin to run until they had covered the full course at a walking pace during the previous night. They ran as fast as they could, and brave men can do no more.

The most agreeable feature of the race of 1915 was undoubtedly the appearance upon the roadside, as we passed Wellesley, of enchanting bevies of its students in their pretty Spring frocks, with smiles on their pretty faces and excitement sparkling in their eyes. They clapped their hands and cheered, as women always will when men do heroic deeds before them. They will remember these sturdy runners when the names of the most intellectual students now at Harvard are forgotten in their maiden orisons. Faint heart never won fair lady, nor foremost brains either, unless accompanied by more material attractions. Possibly, in the interest of eugenics, this is for the best.

A Turf Course the Real Thing.

The road on which the race was run was as good, for the most part, as modern civilization can show—for automobiles at any rate. It must have felt rather hard to the foot in the latter miles, and the first two or three miles were over an old-fashioned dusty highway, which the managers of the affair had neglected to treat to a watering cart. Consequently the runners began their effort with mouths and nostrils full of the soil of New England, and there was no leisure to stop and swab it out. A short, firm turf would be best, but where is there such a course to be found? It might be had by making the course circular, with a diameter, say, of a mile. But it is tiresome for a runner to retrace his steps or to go round and round. We and the runners must make the best of things as they are.

The automobiles contained some local dignitaries. Mayor Curley was there, and he talked about the exacerbation of the sensibilities of our colored brethren of African descent, with a deputation of whom he had been in conference earlier in the day. A handsome man is the young Mayor, with a big, masculine head and a healthy complexion; his eyes are strong, watchful and diplomatic. He kept close to the leaders of the race all through, which is a good quality in a Mayor.

Other municipal officials were in the dusty procession, and there were a number of officials not municipal, but ephemeral creatures of the day, who did their best to magnify their office and to mortify persons who failed of sufficient respect for it. But to manage a Marathon is no light matter, and an authority which will carry twenty-six miles is a good deal of authority after all.

After the order of finishing in the race seemed reasonably assured, our car forged ahead and we alighted opposite the Boston Athletic Association clubhouse, in Exeter street, to see them come in. A score of cameras awaited them; but, indeed, the race must have been photographed on ten thousand films, from start to finish; everywhere one happened to glance along the course, kodaks and others were aiming and snapping. How thankful we should be for even one photograph of the British competition in 1775! Meanwhile, though I can imagine that Mr. Fabre may have been glad to see himself depicted as breaking that little red string which is the official tape, yet it is hard to understand what good for anybody, except nerve specialists, can be gained by taking portraits of the losers in the agonies of defeat.

Still, any man who can go twenty-six miles in less than three hours is a man to reckon with, and his physical effigy deserves to be perpetuated. I am sure all these young gentlemen have my hearty respect and admiration.

Extent of Evers' Injury Not Known

TROY, N. Y., April 20.—Johnny Evers, who was hurt in Saturday's game at Boston, is confined to his home in this city and the extent of his injury is not definitely known. The Braves' captain when seen at his home today said he was expecting some X-ray pictures from Boston which were taken after Saturday's game. In addition to the strain at the knee there is some trouble at the ankle and Evers is anxious to have the pictures inspected by his Troy physician. He said there was considerable pain in the ankle when he attempted to place any weight upon it.

HARVARD WORKS AT GEORGETOWN

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 20.—As there is no game scheduled for the Harvard team for today, the Crimson players went out to Georgetown this morning and held a long practice session on the varsity field. Coach John D. O'Reilly, the former Boston school instructor, gladly extended the Harvard boys an invitation to work out at Georgetown and did everything in his power to make things agreeable for the Cambridge collegians.

Dick Harte worked out at third and showed that with some practice he could be developed into a first-class infielder. Most of the practice time was used up hitting, and Harvard is fast developing into a fine batting team.

GUESTS OF RILEY.

This afternoon the Harvard boys will attend the Red Sox-Washington game as guests of Eddie Riley, the Red Sox secretary. Riley has reserved a section of the box directly behind the Boston bench for the Harvard players.

There was very little excitement in yesterday's game with Maryland Agricultural College, Harvard romping home a 9 to 2 winner. With the exception of Johnnie Waterman, who drew three bases on balls, every one of the Harvard regulars hit safely at least once.

Heine Nash led the team with the willow, connecting with a single, a double and a fine home run. Nash's circuit drive was the longest ever made on College Park, the ball clearing the left centre field fence by a wide margin and finally alighted in a field on the opposite side of the main street. Mickey Reed, Bob Gamett and Charlie Brickley hit safely twice.

BRAVES STRIKE PROPER STRIDE

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Now that the Braves have started—and who will say they have not started after winning three straight?—we may be sure they will do their utmost to keep going in the right direction. Today at Fenway Park they meet the Brooklyns again. The Brooklyns look easy. They have the makings of a good ball club, but somehow things don't seem to go right with them. Breaks are bad, the men become discouraged too easily; they haven't the fighting spirit of the Braves and never had it. These and other reasons show why they usually finish in the second division.

With the weather continuing beautiful there ought to be a good sized crowd out to see the sport, even if it is wash day. Men do not have to wash clothes, as a matter of fact; at least if some of them do they are mighty careful not to tell anyone about it.

PREDICT LEAN YEAR.

Careful observers declare that the present baseball year will be a lean one financially. But it is too early to form an opinion. In some of the big league cities decreased business has been at all what were expected, in spite of the weather.

But here in Boston there is certainly nothing to complain of. There were more than 7,000 at the morning game yesterday and close to 22,000 in the afternoon. Brooklyn is not much of an attraction. If the visiting ball team were there yesterday the chances are that the park would have been packed in the afternoon.

George Tyler is coming around, and he will be ready to pitch soon. It is possible he may be in condition to start a good warmup yesterday at the same time that Rudolph was getting ready to pitch and we thought George would be the selection. But Stallings told me yesterday that Tyler was just a shade below the right condition. If Tyler doesn't pitch today it is possible he will be ready by tomorrow.

LUQUE IS READY.

Shilling has Luque, the Cuban, ready. He pitched great ball on the training trip and doubtless the Boston fans would like to see him work a full game. Cocreham is also ready for the word. James needs a few more days, it is said.

For Brooklyn it would not be surprising to see Nap Rucker on the firing line. This celebrated southpaw says he is in better shape than he has been for a long time. He pitched a fine game against New York last week, but unfortunately was stacked up against Marquard when the Rube was loaded for a no-hit game by previous agreement, neither side said a word on the field. There was no coaching from the side lines, and no shouts from the bench.

My friend says he never attended a duller game and hopes he will never see another like it. The fans were in sharp when there is occasion for it, and they want to see the players show some life.

Why, if we didn't say a word, or do any coaching, a lot of people would think we were not trying to win.

Yes, sir, the game needs a little chatter from the players of both sides, and unless it is overdone I believe the chatter should be encouraged rather than frowned upon.

I was glad to see Paul Strand come through in the morning game. That boy has plenty of stuff and the win will give him the right kind of encouragement. He works faster than he did last year—not so deliberate—and I think it helps him. It is generally believed by the public that he lacked control, but he didn't lack it yesterday. He only issued two passes and three of the hits made off him were made when two men were out. He struck out a batsman for each inning except the eighth. All our players are willing to see him come through and it now looks as though we had another good, dependable pitcher on our staff.

Joe Schultz, who trained down South with the Braves for two Springs, is now playing third for Brooklyn. Joe made some mighty good plays in the two games yesterday, and helped his side to some of their runs with the stick.

Jack Coombs, who helped Connie Mack win more than one pennant for the Athletics, watched the last three innings of the morning game for the Dodgers. While it is not to be expected that he will ever be as effective as he was in his prime, it is easy to see that he is a master of his profession. We did not hit him at all and only one ball, a fly to Myers in the ninth, went beyond the outfield. Nor could we score on him, although he issued four passes.

"The Rabbit's" Column
By Walter J. Maranville
SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

Well, Old Hank Gowdy did some batting in that matinee game yesterday, did he not? Four times up and four safe hits will fatten his average, and put him right in the running for batting honors. Let Hank catch one on the end of his bat and the ball is apt to travel. He made the Brooklyn outfielders do considerable chasing yesterday. I look for him to keep up the good work. When Gowdy is hitting our chances of victory are increased not a little.

Eddie Fitzpatrick, who played next to me in both games, did fine work, handling everything that came his way cleanly—and there were a couple of hot ones. His double play was a beauty. International Leaguers tell me that Fitz was a very hard-working, and a steady player last season, and I have no doubt of it now that I have seen him at close hand in the big show. From what I learn of Byers' condition Johnnie will be out for a couple of weeks. In the meantime I feel sure his place will be well taken care of by Fitzpatrick.

We can't say a word from the bench these days or the umpires threatening to chase us. I do not believe any player likes to see a lot of dummies on the bench. The public likes some chatter and saying as we do not say anything personal—that is do not attack the opposing players with verbal flings, I see no good reason why we should not be allowed to encourage our own men from the bench. That is all we do. We like to hand out some encouraging words to our boys at bat or on the base. But the umps won't stand for much of it and in this I think they are wrong.

An old-timer told me the other day that away back in the eighties he witnessed a game at the old South End Grounds between the Phillies and Bostons where, by a peculiar coincidence, neither side said a word on the field. There was no coaching from the side lines, and no shouts from the bench.

My friend says he never attended a duller game and hopes he will never see another like it. The fans were in sharp when there is occasion for it, and they want to see the players show some life.

Why, if we didn't say a word, or do any coaching, a lot of people would think we were not trying to win.

RUTH TO FACE THE SENATORS

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Manager Griffith said this morning that he would work Joe Engle against the Red Sox this afternoon, with Jim Shaw in reserve in case of necessity. Manager Carrigan said his selection would be either Ruth or Cometsk with the chances favoring the former if he warmed up all right.

The victory yesterday put the local "fans" in good humor and another big crowd will turn out this afternoon. The "fans" dearly love to see the team come from behind as it did yesterday, as it gives them something to talk about.

Eddie Ainsmith has been hitting the high places in this city during the past Winter and this Spring. Several months ago he ran down an old man with his automobile and was carried into court, and yesterday he was up again before the local court.

AINSMITH IN COURT.

This time he came within an inch of running down a car conductor in Georgetown and the latter had the nerve to call him down for speeding by his car. As a result Sir Edward stopped his car, came back to see the conductor, words followed and the catcher gave the ticket puncher quite a severe beating. The affair cost Eddie a twenty dollar bill and now the conductor threatens to sue him for damages.

When told of the affair Griff was very wrathy and the latter confessed would have a nifty time collecting damages from Mr. Ainsmith, as he has drawn his salary already up to next August.

Umpire Billy Evans has made his report on the charges of Shore using his every ball to President Ban Johnson and he expects to hear from the head of the American League within a few days in regard to how to proceed in such matters.

HIGHLAND DRIVE,

BOSTON AMERICAN
80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, APRIL 20, 1915.

The Public Wants Light on the Gas Situation

But It Does Not Want Uninformed, Arbitrary and Perhaps Unjust Action—The Legislature Will Only Make Itself Ridiculous if It Passes the Sullivan Bill

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The Sullivan bill to arbitrarily reduce the price of gas in Boston to 70 cents after June 30, 1916, should be killed. It involves a breach of faith. It is unjust. It is oppressive. It is reactionary. It would destroy the sliding scale act of 1906, which is the most successful piece of progressive legislation enacted in Massachusetts during the last ten years. Under that act the price of gas in Boston has been reduced from $1 (or more) per 1,000 feet to 80 cents; and what is even more important to the people than this great saving—"gas was taken out of politics." The series of lobby scandals at the State House and City Hall, which followed one another in rapid succession throughout twenty years, were, by this act, completely eliminated; and under honorable management the company gave to the community efficient service amidst general satisfaction.

If it be true that the Boston company ought to sell gas for less than 80 cents after June 30, 1916, the sliding scale bill provides the method for properly determining that fact—namely, by referring the question for decision to the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners.

To arbitrarily fix now by legislation the price of gas in Boston at 70 cents, and so limit the return on the capital stock, is both unwise and unfair. The people would in the end be the chief sufferers from such an act of injustice.

Yours very truly,
LOUIS D. BRANDEIS.

The above letter of Mr. Brandeis opposing the Sullivan bill to reduce the price of gas in the City of Boston is characteristically strong.

Mr. Brandeis points out that, during the period of the sliding scale regulation of prices, the price of gas has fallen from more than a dollar to 80 cents. He points out that the orgies of political corruption which scandalized the State during the old gas company quarrels have disappeared since the adjustment of the gas lighting situation by the adoption of the sliding scale. He declares that the people of Boston could afford to pay an enormous price to be relieved from the danger and cost of the constant monkeying with the Legislature which occurred under the old gas companies' regime. All these facts are true and important.

The AMERICAN agrees with Mr. Brandeis that the Sullivan bill is an unwise, unintelligent and chaotic proposal. It is an arbitrary, summary, uninformed attempt by legislation to determine the price of a commodity without investigation and without knowledge of any of the essential facts which must be known to make any opinion better than a mere idle guess.

Probably there is not a single member of the Legislature who KNOWS anything about the facts which affect the price of gas in Boston. Eighty cents may be too high for gas, but nobody in the Legislature KNOWS that it is too high. Seventy cents may not be too low for gas, but nobody in the Legislature KNOWS that it is not too low or even that it is not TOO HIGH.

But the AMERICAN does not agree with Mr. Brandeis that the sliding scale gas law has decisively proved its right to an indefinite continuance. Perhaps it is well to recall to the public mind roughly what the sliding scale means. It is a scheme by which the gas company is permitted to increase its dividends in proportion as it reduces the price of gas to the people of Boston. It cannot increase its dividends until each time it makes a corresponding reduction in the price of gas as determined in the sliding scale law. This sliding scale scheme was Mr. Brandeis' own conception and was adopted from the English practice. Mr. Brandeis may be pardoned, therefore, if he views this plan with a very partial eye.

But the AMERICAN feels that there are many things in the whole gas situation that ought to be investigated. We have a body of experts in the Gas and Electric Light Commission who either know the facts or are capable of readily ascertaining them. This commission has enjoyed the public confidence for a long time. Only two petitions in twenty years for the reduction of gas or electric lighting have been denied by that body. We should ask it to investigate the conditions in the gas business. Let the investigation be public if necessary and let ALL the facts be brought to light. Then, and only then, can the Legislature act even with a show of intelligence.

Let us have an investigation of the sliding scale plan of regulating prices. Let us investigate the relations of the gas company to its allied companies. BUT DO NOT LET THE LEGISLATURE MAKE ITSELF RIDICULOUS BY GIVING SUCH A BILL AS THE ONE MR. BRANDEIS DENOUNCES THE LEAST COUNTENANCE.

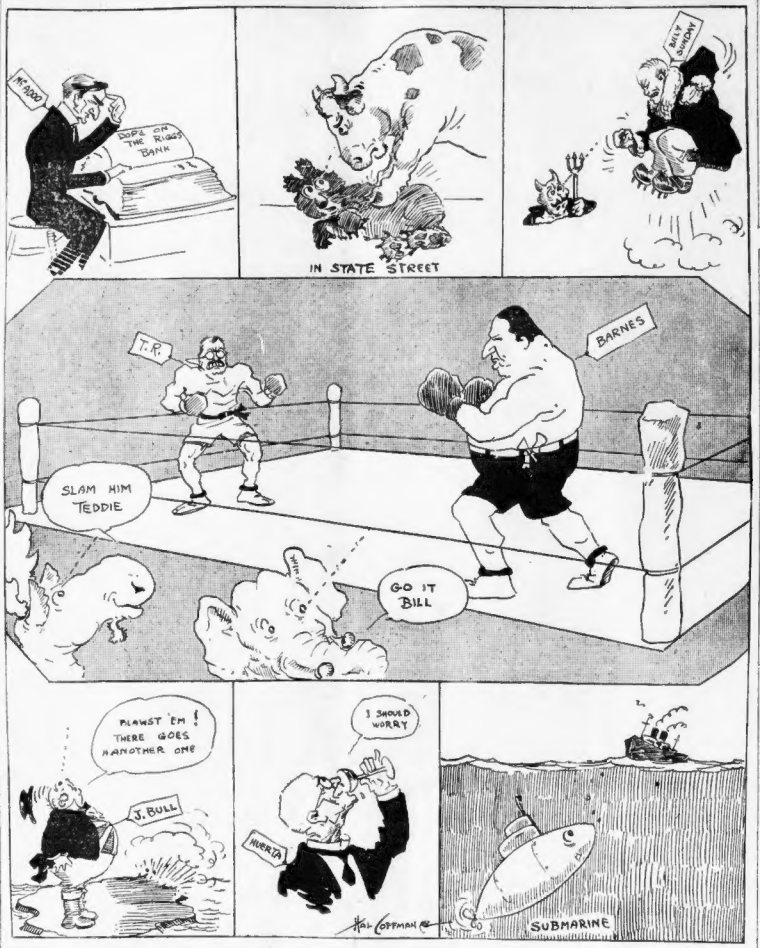
LITTLE star boats on a sea of blue,
Laden with cargoes of dreams anew;
Which one will carry my thoughts for me,
Far on the depths of the blue sky sea?

Riding the mist waves, they drift away,
Into the port of the coming day;
Little star boat riding high on the sea,
Please will you carry my message for me?

Things Are Looking Up



Men and Women Necessary to Each Other

By ELBERT HUBBARD

"HYSTERIA," said the great Dr. Charcot, "is a sex manifestation, and represents an electric explosion resulting from lack of a ground wire."

Near the doctor's office in Paris was a "female academy," to which he was one day called by a messenger who came in hot haste.

The doctor lost no time in getting across the street, and, running upstairs, found a class of twenty young women, fifteen of whom were crying, laughing, screaming, singing, and three girls were stretched out seemingly lifeless.

The terrified teacher explained that one of the girls had fainted, and when she came to her senses, began to laugh.

Two of the girls that were waiting on her then began to cry, and as the others sought to pacify them they, too, caught it, until the whole room seemed like a bacchanalian picnic.

On inquiry the doctor found that many of the girls were subject to such spells.

"What, oh, what shall we do, doctor?" begged the matron.

"I'll tell you," said the doctor—and then he cast about in his mind, as doctors do, for what was best to prescribe.

A bright thought came to him: "You were teaching these girls drawing, you said?"

"Yes, doctor."

"Well, no woman can teach drawing—that is, as well as a man. Give each girl a teaspoonful of this medicine three times a day—and I'll make arrangements to have these twenty pupils draw an hour daily at Monsieur Maumier's."

"Oh, doctor, but they are all young men in Monsieur's classes!"

"I know that—unfortunately—but we can't help it."

The doctor saw Monsieur Maumier, and arrangements were made to have the twenty young women go over and join the class each morning from ten to eleven.

After the class there was a "recess" for fifteen minutes.

The girls were allowed to remain, too; so they stayed and compared pictures, criticised, joked, and, after a week, played tag, pussy-wants-a-corner, and a little innocent, natural rough-house followed with the young men.

And, behold, there was never another case of high-strikes in that academy.

Let the boys and girls meet in a frank, natural and simple way, and we obviate the danger of the secret, the clandestine and the morbid.

In a recent article on education for women Dr. Anna B. Shaw says: "Ten women shut in together will worry one hundred times as much as ten men shut in together. So, also, a hundred women shut in together will exhaust themselves merely by being together; the sensitive temperaments eating into each other like corroding acids. One of the advantages of co-education is a distinct lessening of the emotional and nervous strain among the women students."

Just why the presence of men as teachers and fellow workers should have a tonic and quieting effect upon the nerves of women I do not know, but there is certainly less nervous tension, morbidity and self-consciousness among college women associated with men than among those in strictly women's colleges.

Of course, it is a delicate question for a man to discuss, but I am more than pleased that women are publicly acknowledging that it is not only not good for a man to be alone, but it is a deal worse for a woman.

Personally, I'll admit I don't know much concerning the subject in the concrete, but I'll say right here that if there are no women in heaven I prefer to remain in a place—no matter what the temperature—where the co-ed rule prevails.

60-Year-Old Eloping Wife Wise in Choosing Companion Own Age

Runaway Mrs. Barker at Least Proved Women Are Not as Foolish as Men When Attacked by Love Microbes, Says Dorothy Dix

By DOROTHY DIX

A NEW angle to the eternal triangle was displayed in the Supreme Court of Brooklyn the other day when a man of sixty sued his sixty-year-old wife for divorce and named as the co-respondent a sixty-year-old Lothario.

The parties in this strange suit were Horsley Barker, a druggist, and his wife, Helen, who eloped with a man by the name of Gilbert Hickcock of Plainfield, N. J. The testimony showed that Hickcock had spent most of his time during the last two years gallivanting about the Barker home, where Mrs. Barker, with the uncanny knowledge of the masculine heart that comes of a thirty-seven-year experience of matrimony, fanned the flames of love in his bosom—or, to speak by the cards, in his stomach—by preparing specially dainty dishes for his delectation.

Indeed, one of the bitter charges in Mr. Barker's bill of complaint is that his wife never cooked for him as she did for his rival, and that she would sit him down to any sort of a scrambled meal, while she spread before the pampered Hickcock viands fit for a king.

Other testimony showed that notwithstanding their age, the affinities billed and cooed, and held hands just as if it were Spring with them instead of Indian Summer, and that last July they went to Highland Lake together, where they took snapshots of each other, and wrote each other letters filled with terms of endearment after the manner of young and foolish lovers.

Oh, it was a genuine romance, all right, even if Juliet's hair was gray, and Romeo's head was bald! There was nothing lacking, not even the inevitable obstacle which in this case took the form of a healthy husband instead of a cruel parent, and one of the witnesses in the case deposed that he once saw Mrs. Barker and Mr. Hickock weeping together because they said they wanted to elope, and didn't know how. Finally, however, love found the way, as it always does, and they ran off together to Plainfield. Therefore Mr. Barker desires a divorce from his recreant spouse.

Worth Attention

This story is interesting for many reasons. First and foremost because the faithlessness of one woman turns a searchlight upon the general fidelity of womankind. If we had read in the papers that a man of sixty had eloped with an inamorata, we shouldn't have given it a second thought. It's an everyday occurrence for a man who's old enough to know better to desert wife and home for some woman who has caught his wandering fancy, but for a woman of sixty to be guilty of such a vagary is so rare as to be a startling piece of news, worthy of attention and discussion.

Because custom and convention forbids woman to frankly choose her mate, and condemns her to take what she can get, instead of asking for what she wants, woman has not been as "choosey," as country folks say, as man in regard to her life partner. Also she has stood a great deal more from man than man ever stood from her, so the spectacle of an old wife suddenly kicking over the traces and running away is as amazing as if the patient and broken spirited old family nag should bolt when she got a whiff of green fields and pastures new.

Another interesting feature of this case is that it proves that women are wiser in love than men are, and that they have enough sense, even when they are foolish, to stay in their own age class. Mrs. Barker did not run off with a schoolboy. She eloped with a man who is as old as she, and just as rheumatic, and as willing to sit by the radiator of nights, instead of wanting to be fox trotting. In that, she showed her judgment, and it is some tribute to a woman's gray matter to be a judge of affinities.

When a man, especially an old man, is attacked by the love microbe, it gives him not only softening of the heart, but softening of the brain, so that when he flies the domestic coop, at sixty or over, it is generally in the company of little Totty Coughdrop at the end of the second row of the chorus. The egotism of man permits any little fluffy girl to persuade the aged millionaire that she loves him for himself alone, even though she is young enough to be his granddaughter. But no woman of sixty has the colossal vanity to believe that she can raise a thrill in the breast of any-rah-rah youth. She knows that the only thing about her that causes him a single flutter is the rustle of her money.

Little to Choose

Yet, as a matter of fact, the woman of sixty is, on the average, quite as personally attractive as the man of sixty. By and large, there is little to choose on the score of pulchritude between the fat, bald-headed, bay-windowed man and the stout, grizzled-headed, crow-footed lady of similar years. Indeed, if there is any advantage it is apt to be with the lady, since in these times women devote more time and attention and intelligent thought and care to preserving their health and looks than men do. It is also true that strenuous modern life is harder on men than it is on women, and for that reason men nowadays age faster than women do.

The average woman of sixty is likewise a more interesting and intelligent companion than the average man of sixty, because she grows broader as she grows older, while he generally narrows down. After a woman's children are married and settled she has time to cultivate herself. She joins clubs. She interests herself in big movements for the uplift of the world. She reads, and studies, and travels, and so at sixty many a woman is far more charming than she was at twenty.

Men seldom improve themselves. They stick to their business and let their interests converge upon it until often the man of sixty is nothing but an incarnate grocery store or ledger.

The real interest in this case, though, is, of course, the psychological problem that we shall never solve—the why of the love that was great enough to make an elderly woman who had always lived a quiet, blameless life, suddenly throw her hat over the windmill. At her age one counts the cost of things, and one does not lightly give up one's home and child, and the respect of one's friends, and one's settled place in society.

It must have taken a great passion to make this gentle old lady take the step she did. What caused it? Did some fire of youth flare up into a sudden blaze through the ashes of the years? Was there, hidden in her soul, some ungratified yearning for a romance that she had never had, that she satisfied at this eleventh hour? Did she feel that there were not many more years of life left to her anyway, and did she have the stark courage to determine to fill them with the companionship she found most congenial, no matter what the price she had to pay for it?

It is, of course, very naughty for a lady of sixty to elope with her affinity, and we trust that not many grandmamas will follow her example, but just as a romance, the case of Mrs. Barker has had no parallel since the days of Ninon de L'Enclos, whose little affairs made history.

This is a Big Story with a bigger idea back of it. The question of marriage and divorce is handled in a frank, forceful manner by one of America's greatest novelists
